THIS YEAR BRINGS MANY CHANGES

In the new debate class stressing research and presentation, Larry Braun, Rick Foxworthy, Mike Davis, and Bob McDonald check Janet Kingsbury's arguments.

New counselors Mr. Moore and Dr. Eagle, advise Milburn Aldrich and Carol Schriener in the more centrally located guidance center.

Learning to adapt to changes is an important part of education; this year North Central adjusted quickly to a large increase in population, a new administrative trio, an expanded curriculum, and a more systematized program of activities.

Faculty sponsors and student heads of clubs join in the first leadership conference, featuring a guest speaker, a panel, and dinner afterwards.

With the aid of a new wall chart, Mr. DeWitt, Miss Bagby, and Dr. Schwilck plan class schedules and adjust programs to meet the needs of each pupil.

WE CHANGE OUR CLASSES

To meet the challenge of a changing world, the school's curriculum was extended to cover new phases of education essential to present day living, without sacrificing the basic requirement of a solid foundation for superior academic achievement.

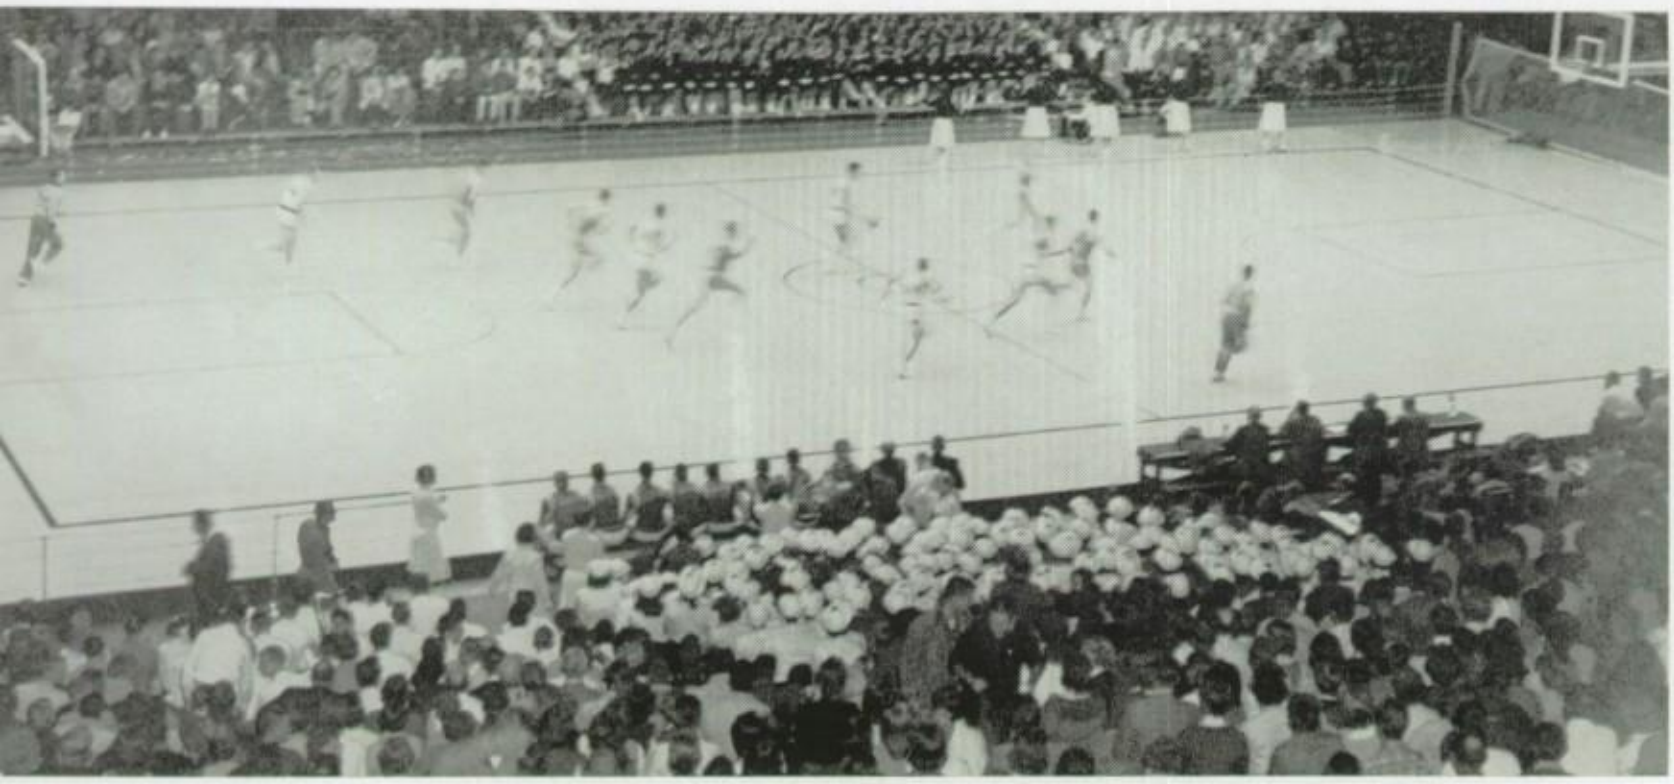
Pupils in Mrs. Sutherland's world literature class extend their literary knowledge beyond the United States.

Hearing the President's "State of the Union" message over the radio is literally a picnic for pupils in Mr. Freeland's government class who eat lunch while listening.

CHANGE OUR EXTRA CURRICULAR ACTIVITIES

Players Larry Gorsky and Steve Wilson concentrate on chess moves, oblivious of other members of the newly organized Chess Club.

For the first time, North Central meets Broad Ripple in basketball played on the neutral floor of Butler Fieldhouse.

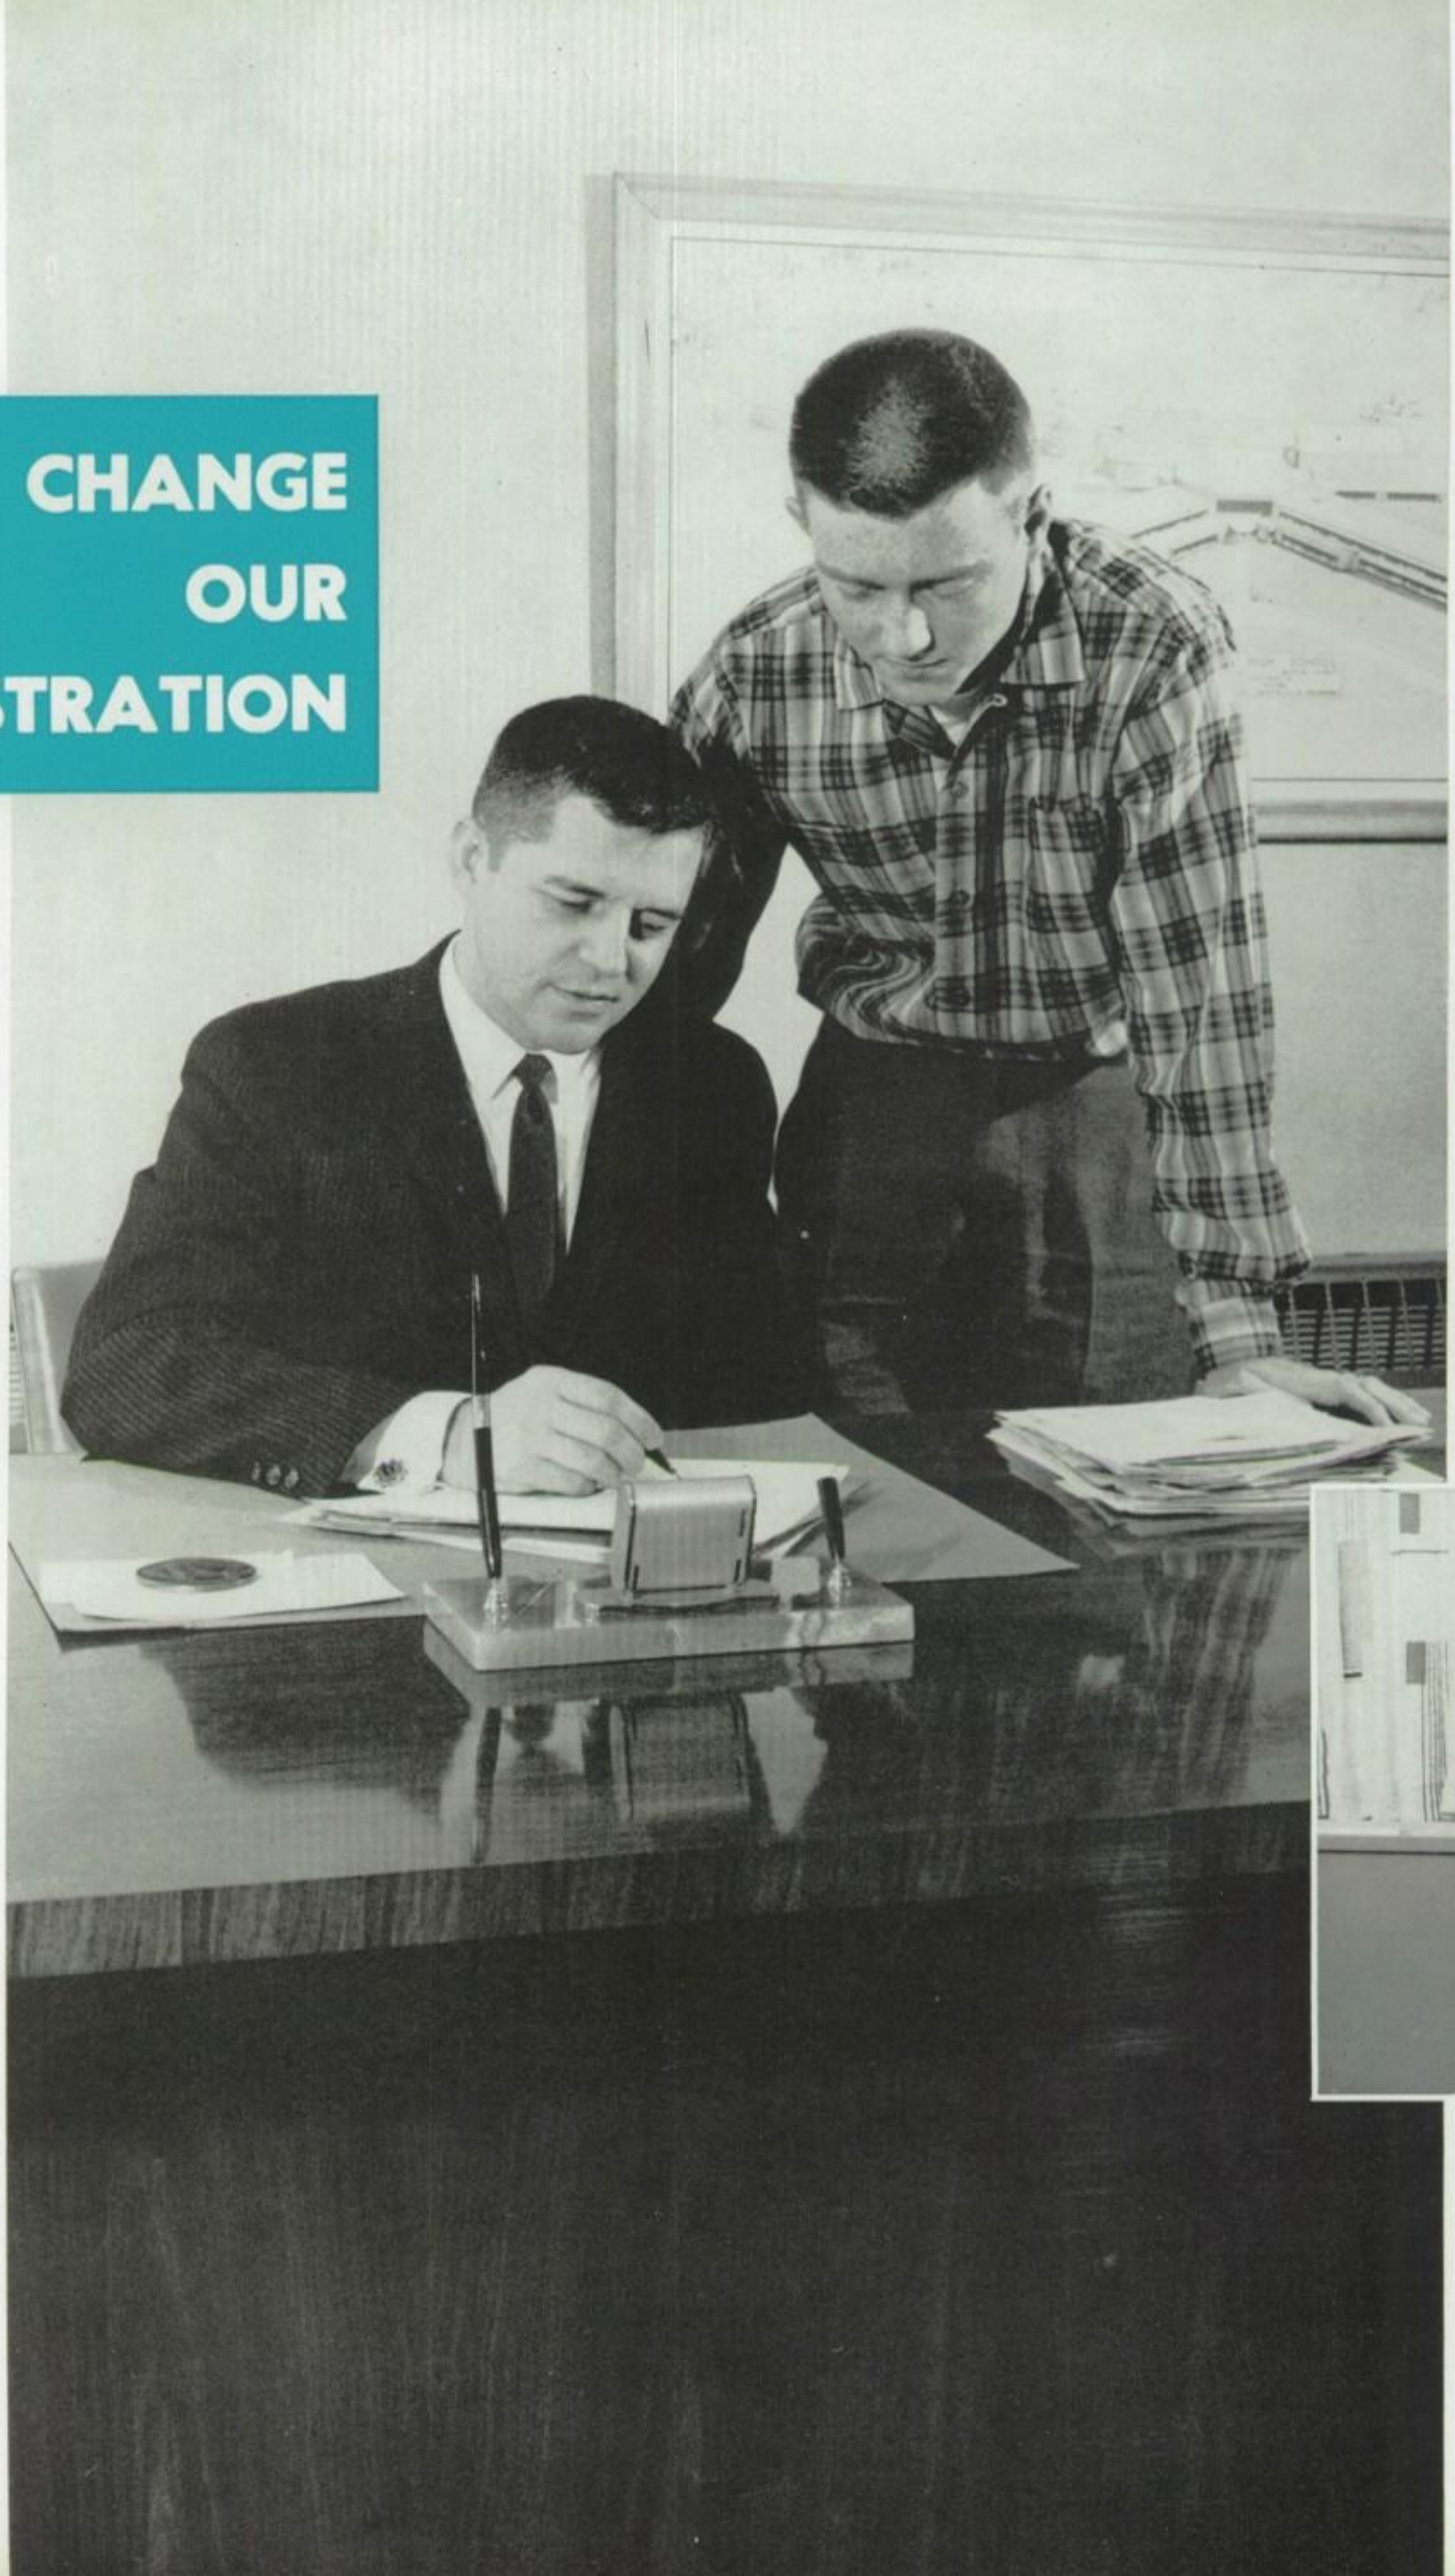


Appearing in "The Egg and I", the first play to be scheduled in the fall, are cast members Paul Partlow, Dick Osborn, Judy Hiatt, Linda Hirt, Chuck Silet and Betsy Vickery.

Dave Richards, Judy Mendell, and Mike White help decorate for this year's holiday dance, "The Frosty Fantasy".

Recognizing the need to increase classroom knowledge beyond that given within limits imposed by time, and also to provide opportunities to explore other fields of interest, the school added new groups to last year's list of activities which met during the Tuesday and Thursday homeroom activity periods in each week.

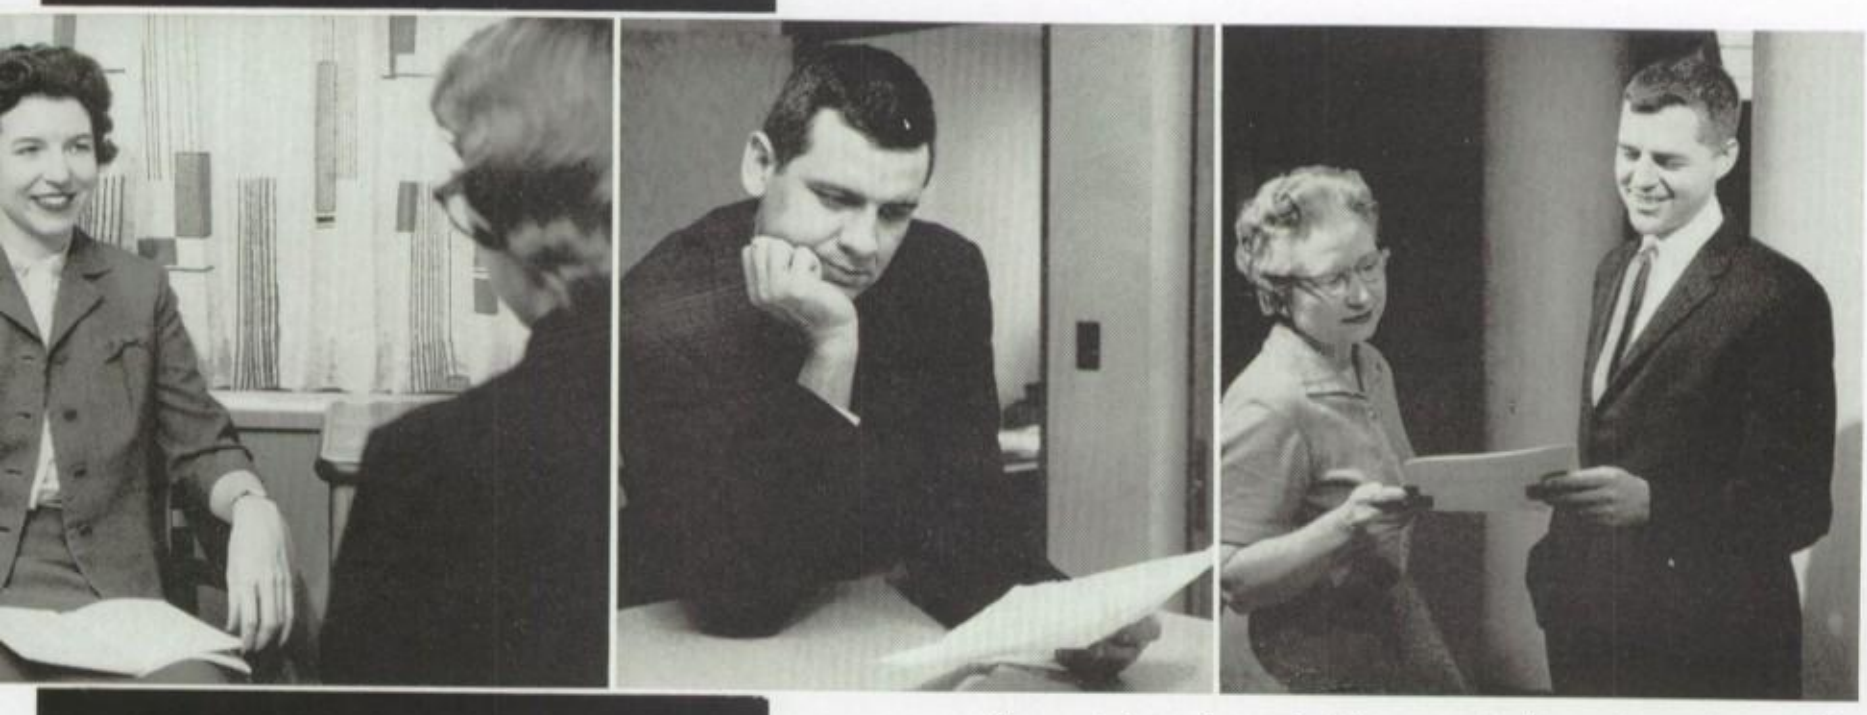
CHANGE OUR ADMINISTRATION



Dr. Schwilck, (left) sincerely interested in the welfare of North Centralites, discussess affairs of the student body with one of its representative citizens, Student Council President, Don Foley.

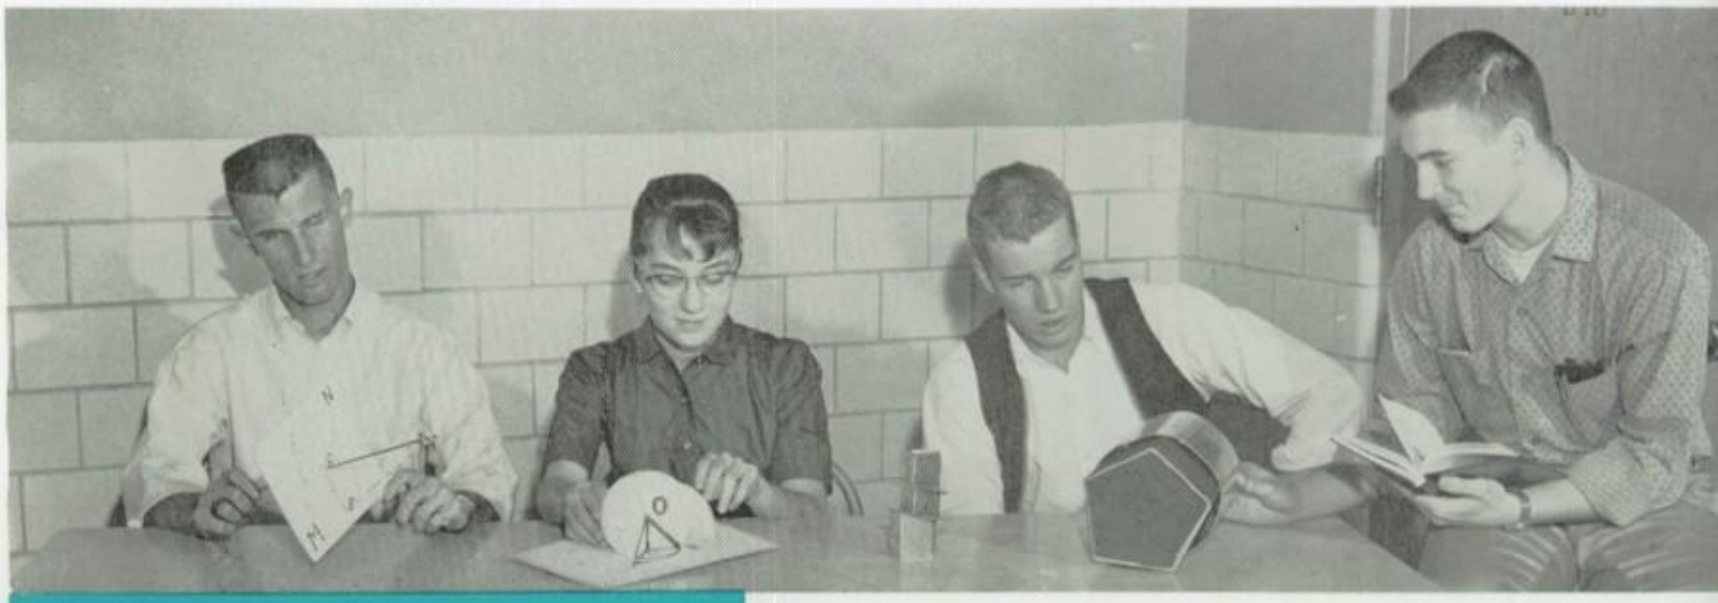
Miss Bagby and Mr. DeWitt confer on administrative tasks in coordinating the activities of a top ranking school.

A change in administration this year brought in three new people, a principal and two assistant principals, whose "oneness" in purpose and ideals became apparent immediately, creating in the school an atmosphere of solidarity and of unity.



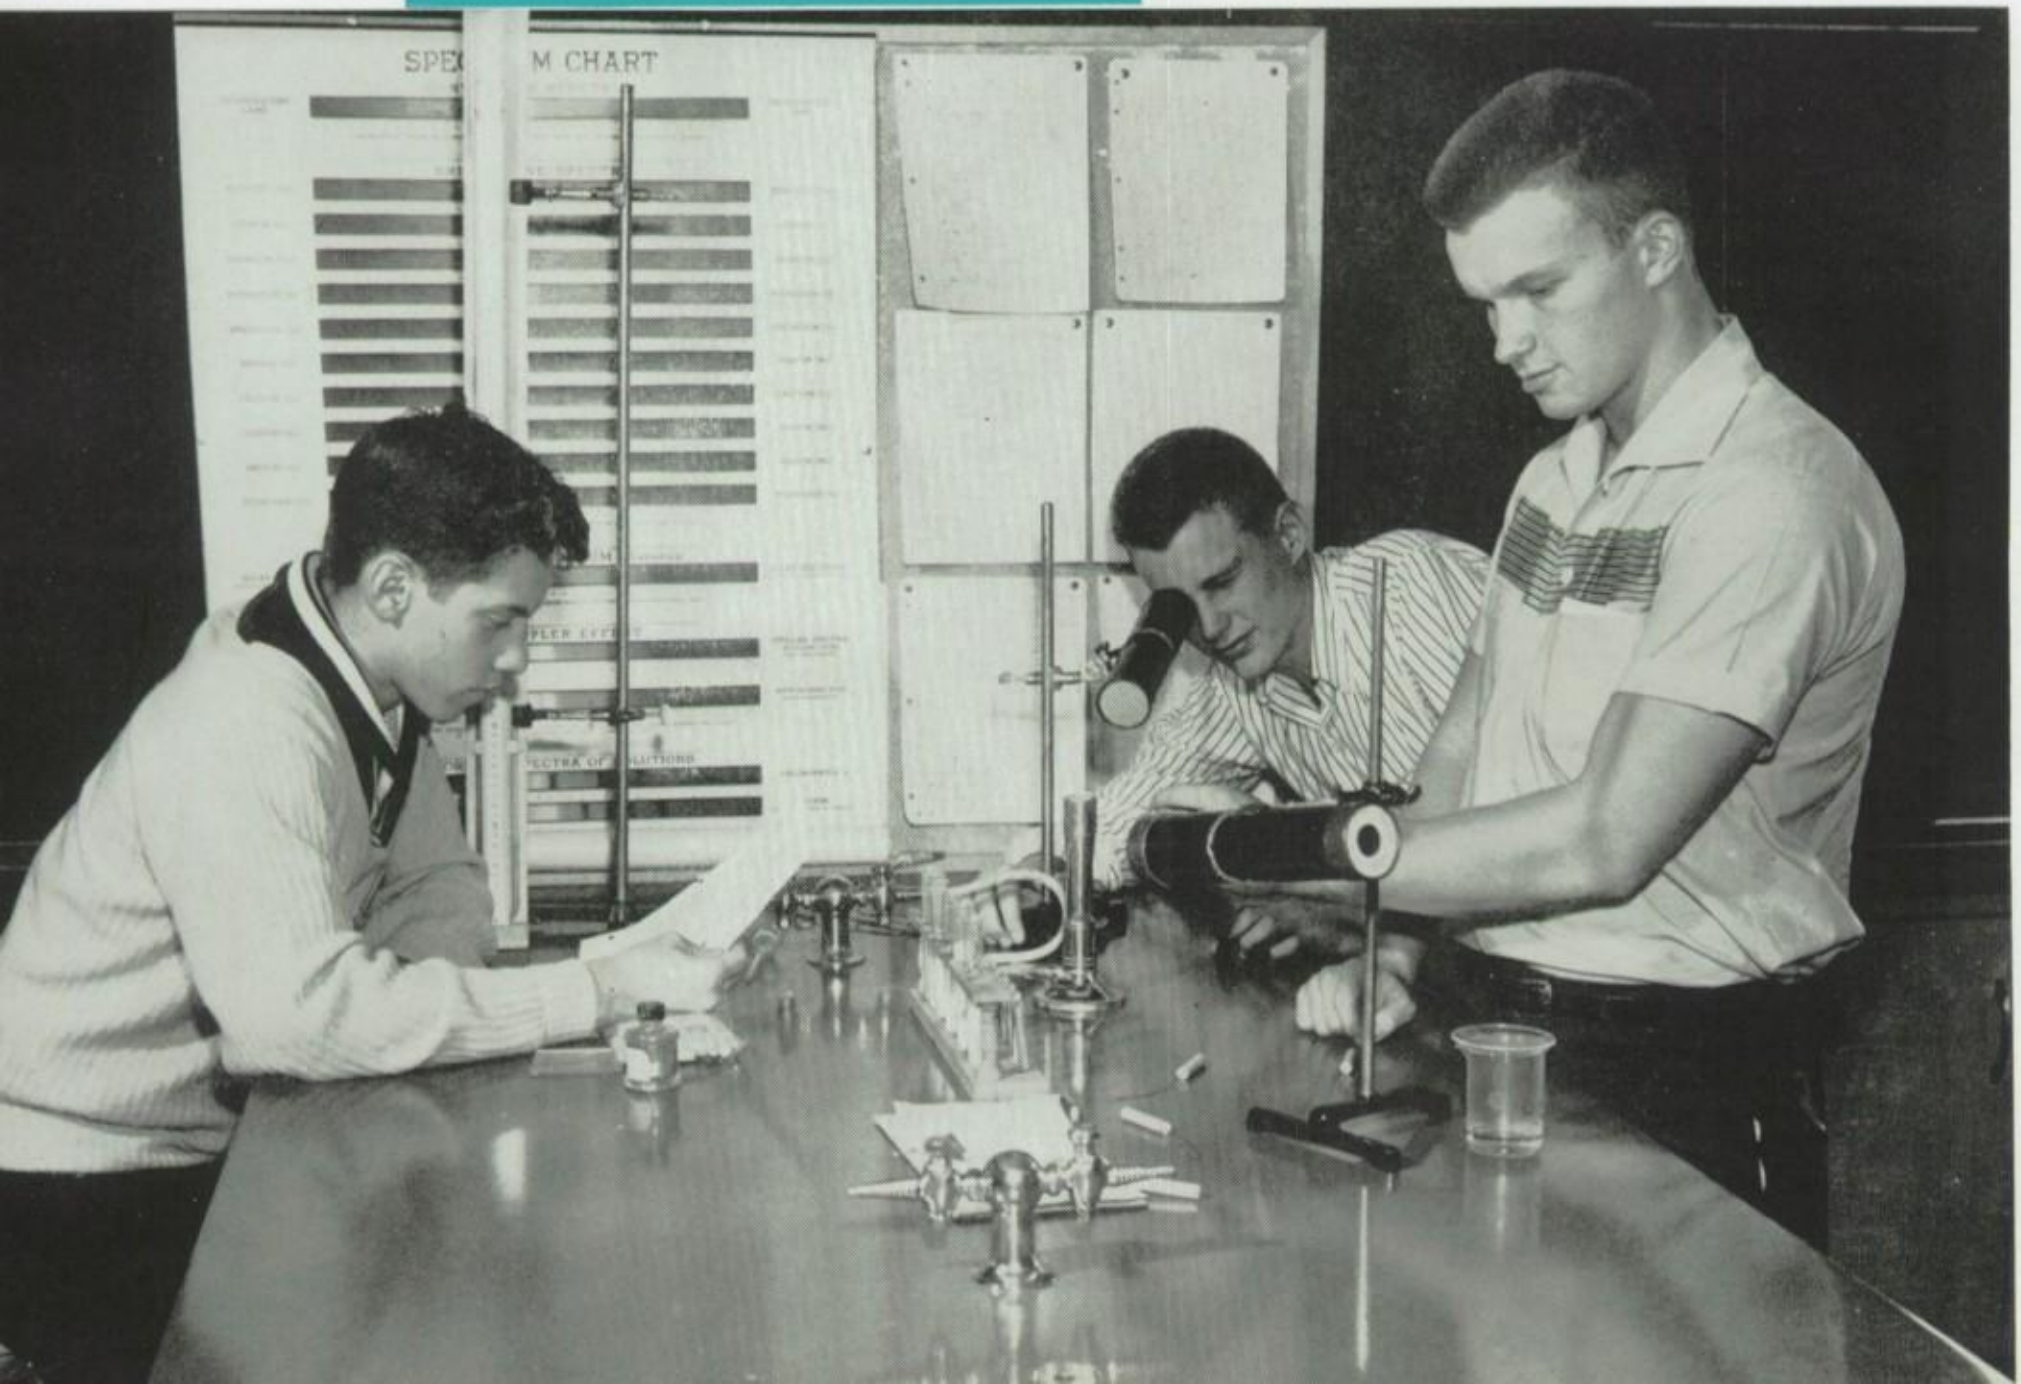
Personal interviews, decisions, curriculum plans, phone calls, personnel problems, and many miles of school corridor — all add up to a strenuous day for the three administrators.

Solid geometry pupils Larry Hannah, Margaret Coates, Morris Kurz, and David Able use tangible representations of solid objects to help solve their problems in class.



ACADEMIC STANDARDS REMAIN HIGH

Experimentation is encouraged in science classes; working on a project of their own are Paul Martin, Jim Hargraves and Phil Carson.



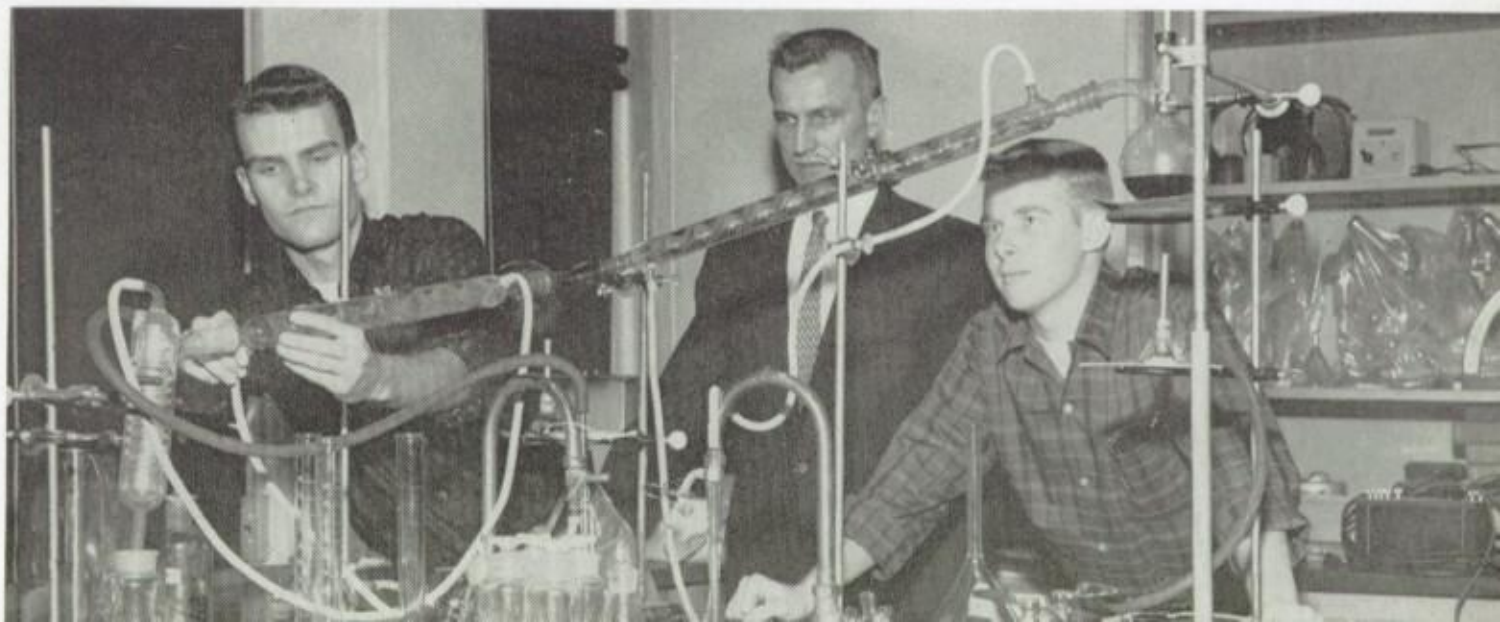
Academic standards, set high from the beginning, climbed even higher this year as Centralites, aware of the need for a better-than-average education, earned excellent grades in difficult subjects chosen from extensive offerings.

Carol Eaton, Ann Blasingham, and Sandy Butler examine the intricate structure of plants.

Bug collecting sends Margie Bitner outside but Rollie Nail and Larry Chesterfield are confined to lab work indoors with Mr. Watson.

Math's importance today was recognized by providing eight courses ranging from General Math to calculus. Top seniors studied philosophy of mathematics in a seminar, Modern Math. Thirty graduates earned twelve semesters each in higher math; twelve continued for fifteen.

In the Science Department, teachers filled a dual role. They trained pupils who would someday be available in an area of critical shortages and they guided their classes into realizing the cultural value of scientific thinking in interpretation and evaluation of current issues. An extensive curriculum, labs open for after-school experimentation, and a Saturday electronics class to meet the demand for more time made this department outstanding in its scope.



Dr. Herman B. Wells of I.U., one of several college prexies to visit North Central this year, stops to talk with Mr. Brown whose German class he visited with guide Eric Norman.

Bill Lawler and Kay Booton, examining Latin projects, agree that research for them provides excellent supplementary work.

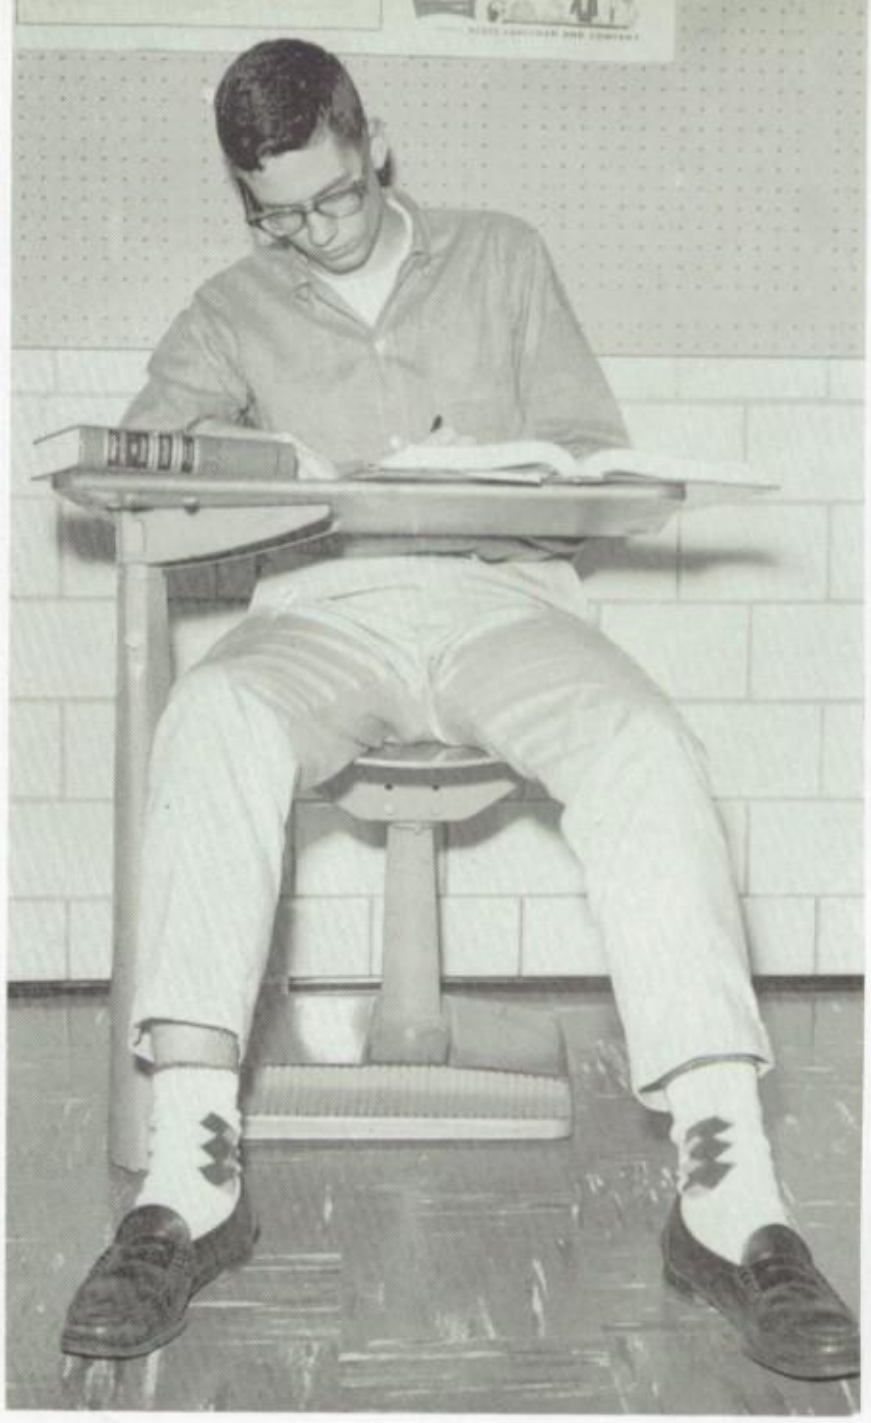
Careful planning enhances merit of English and language courses

Cora Kramer and Tamsin Lee find classroom adaptations of popular television quiz games helpful in learning French.

Russian may "look like Greek" but Jim Berner and Randy Jehs, watching Sue Gillis making a poster, understand it.

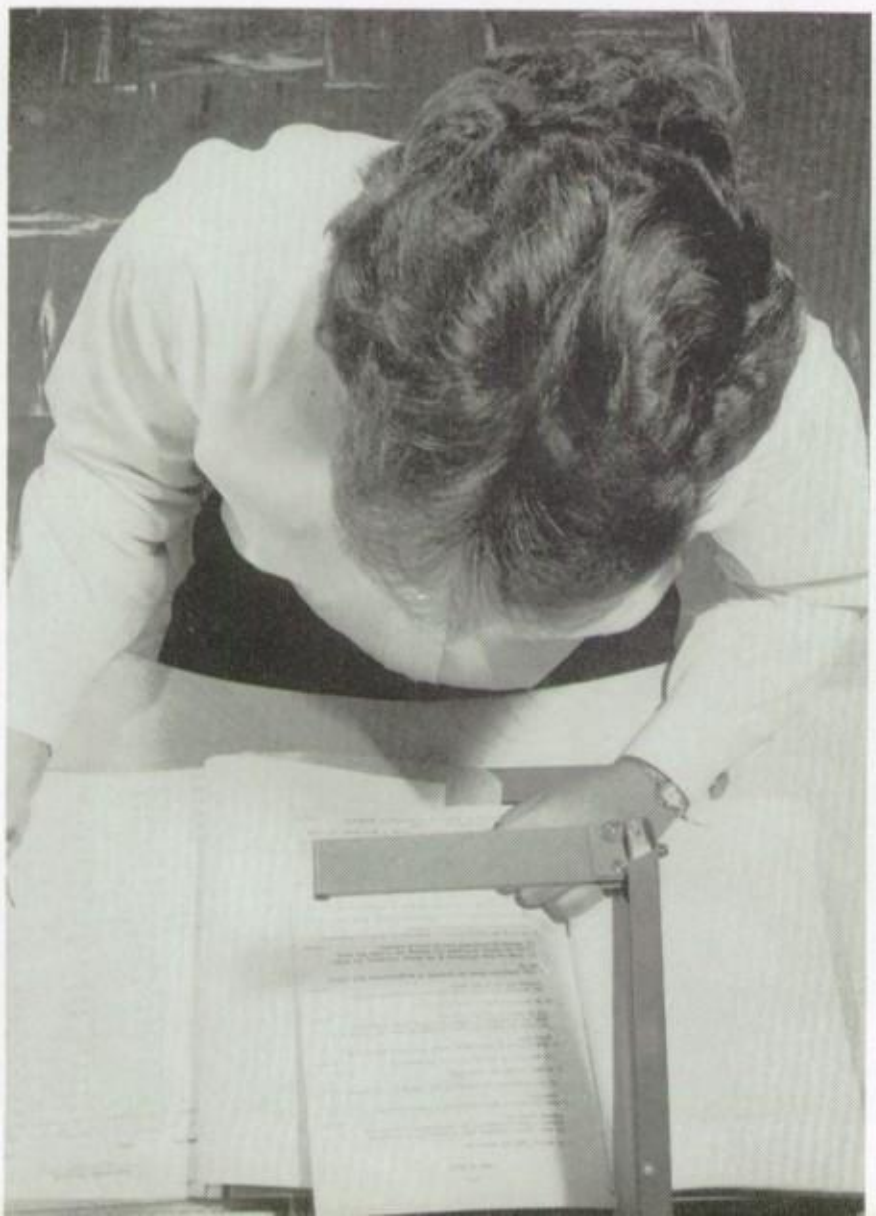
English and Language Departments shared a common goal this year—preparing North Centralites for communication challenges to be met in an adult world—reading, writing, speaking, and listening well in both their native and a foreign tongue. English teachers explored exciting new fields, combining classes to share specialized knowledge; setting up an intensive program of directed outside reading; doubling the Developmental Reading facilities; and initiating the use of paper-bound volumes of classics purchased by the library.

Language teachers concentrated on developing skill in speaking, reading, and writing French, Spanish, German, Russian, and Latin, while acquainting pupils with the customs, civilization, and history of the various countries involved. A language lab was the fall, 1960, goal. Both departments used university consultants for curriculum advice.

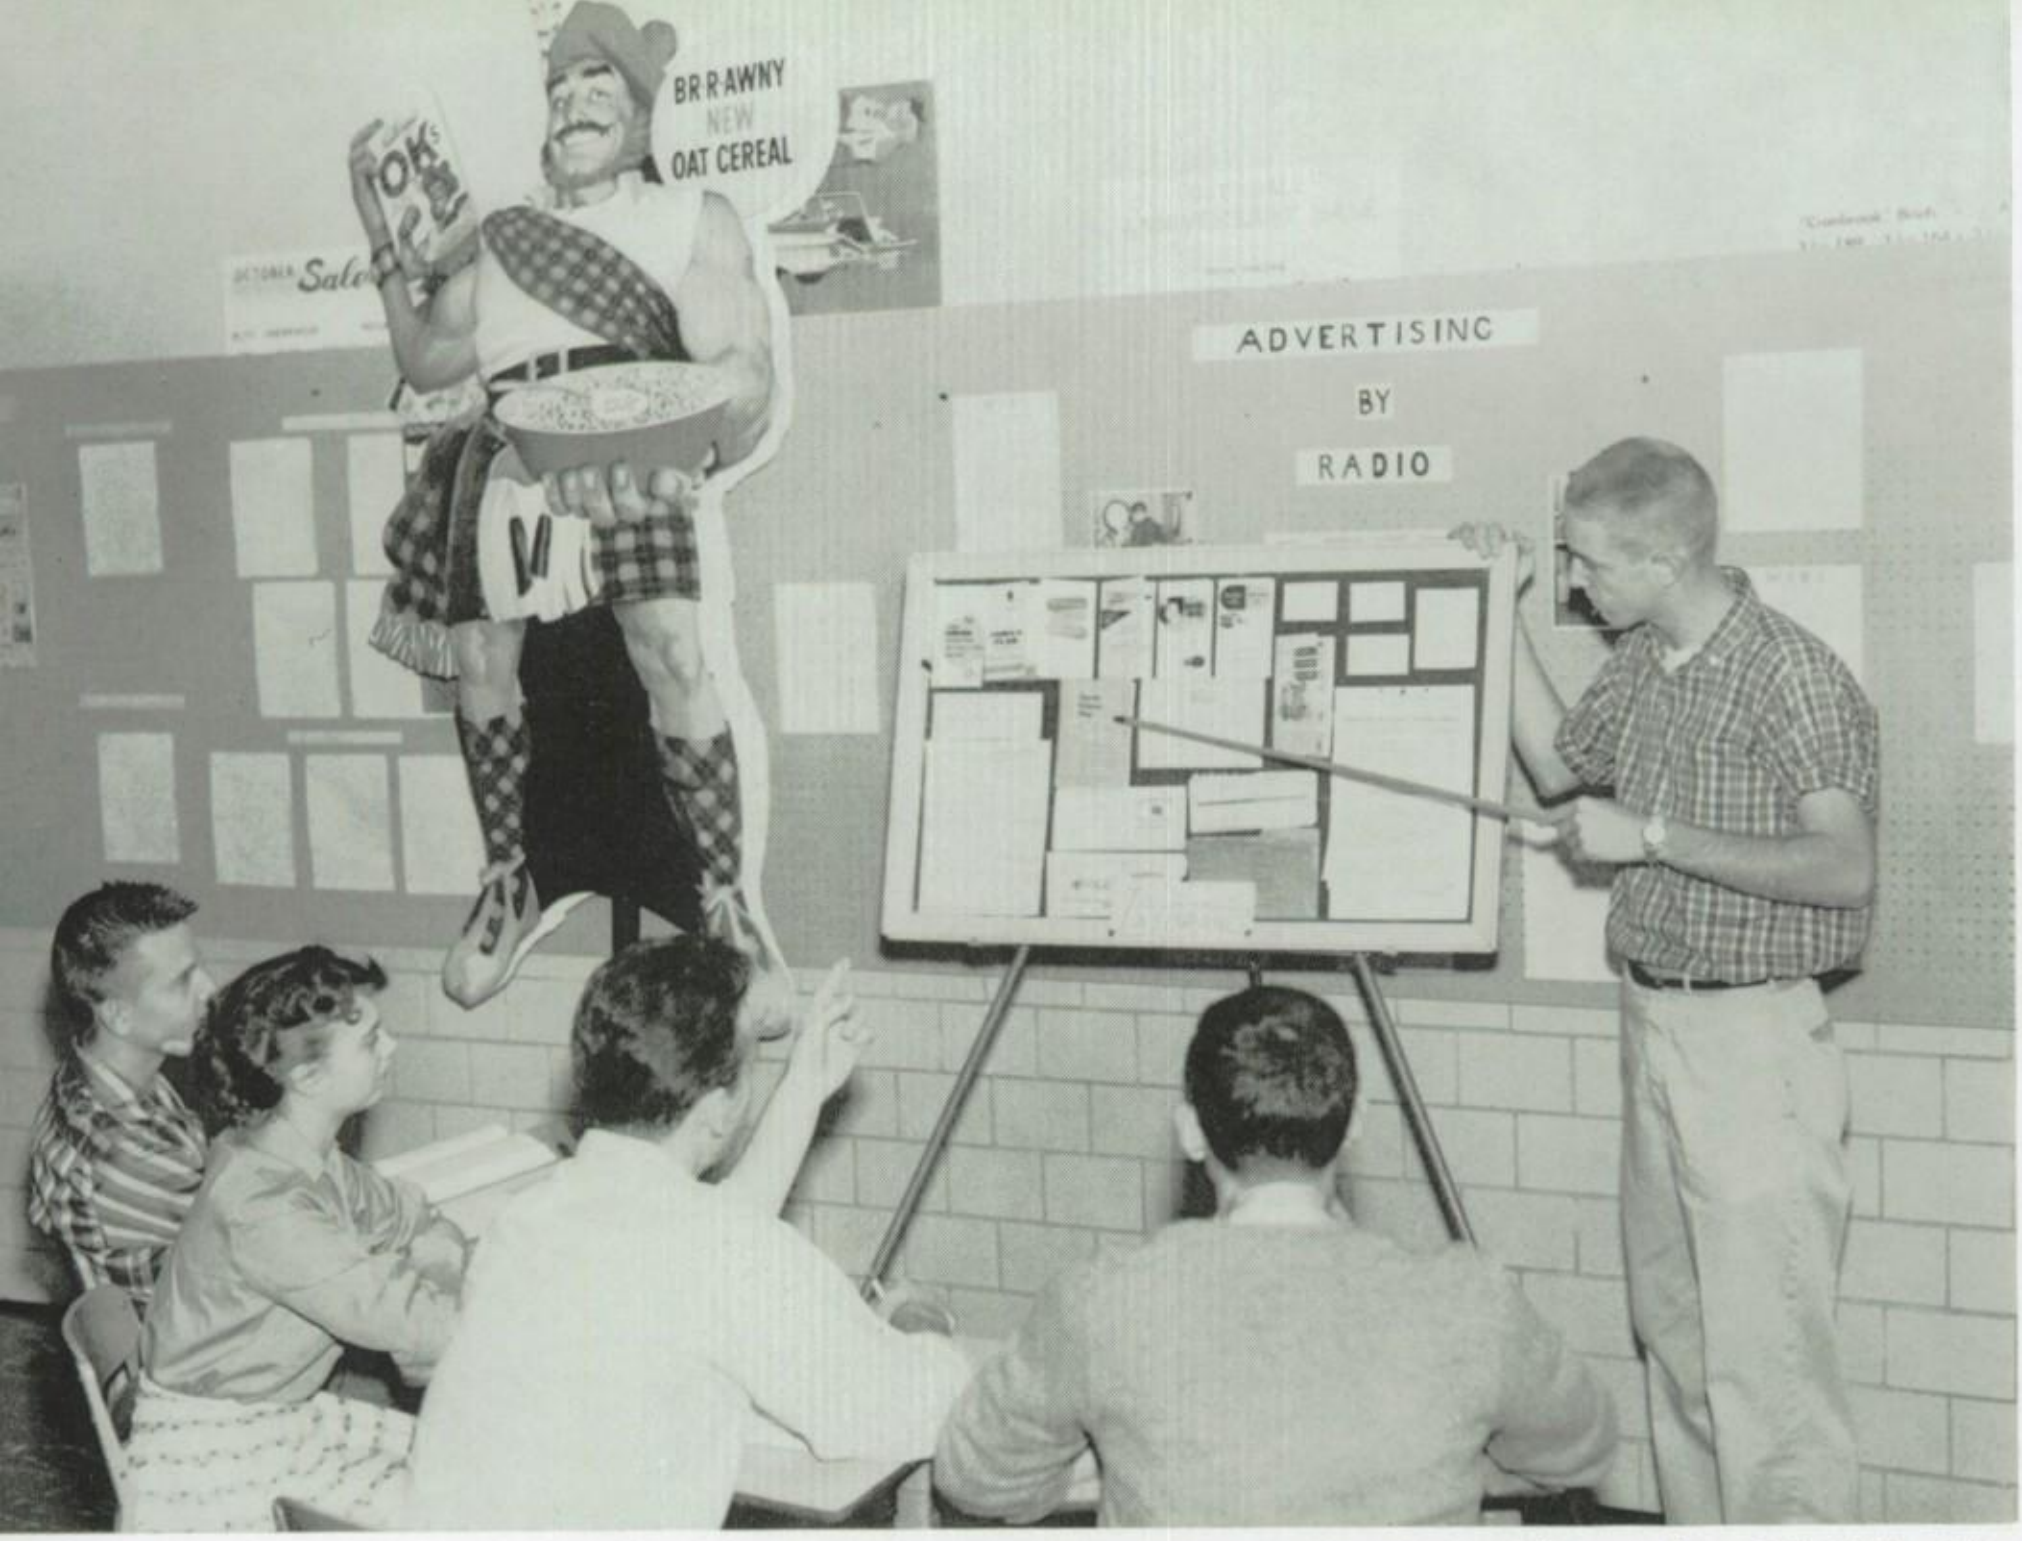


Using the only reference material permitted, Steve Hall consults textbooks and dictionaries for impromptu English themes.

Sue Hogan evaluates a test to note progress made in Reading Lab as a result of speed and comprehension drill work.



Teaching make-up to Penny Sams, Mary Beth McNay, and Bill Raudenbush, Mr. Lord demonstrates on Pat Radloff.



Jim Danby explains a sales promotion campaign to fellow members of the Selling Class.

Kitty Grummann and Lynne Umphrey, though college bound, make sure they have a working skill to use if necessary.

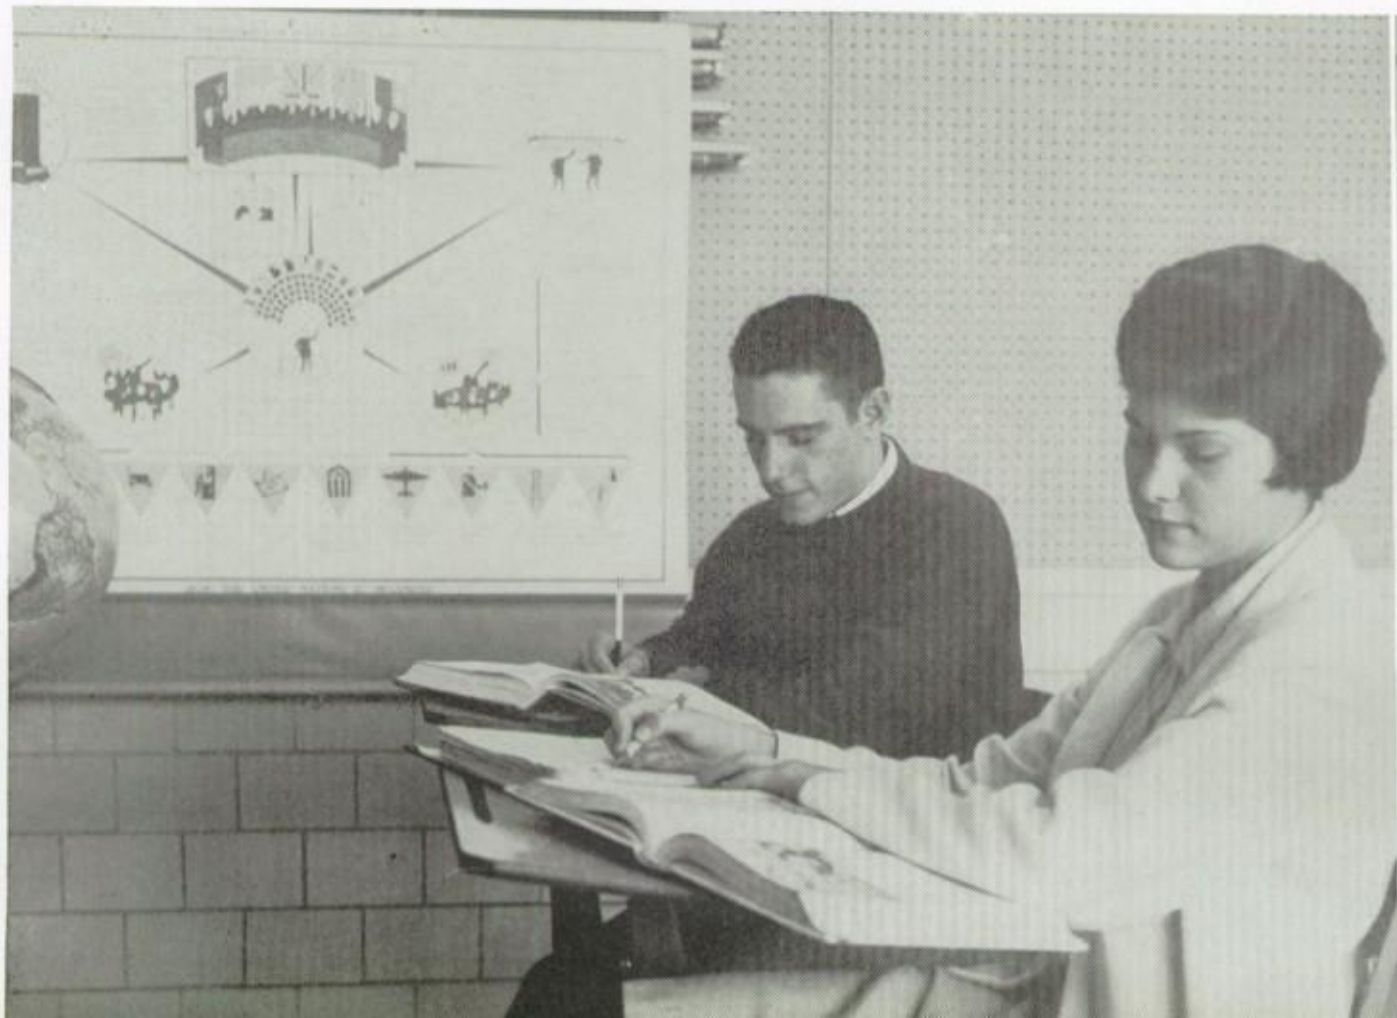
Learning to type on electric machines gives typists such as Carol Sanger a better chance for employment.

Although a preponderance of Centralites enter college following graduation, many are not able to continue four years; others need to supplement their incomes while attending. With this in mind, the Business Department set a more-than-adequate curriculum consisting of shorthand and typing, business law, bookkeeping, salesmanship, office machines and clerical practice, adding personalized typing as a one-semester course. College bound people were given an excellent social studies background with such subjects as sociology, psychology, history, and economics. Both departments arranged interesting field trips. The Business Department also pioneered in closed circuit TV with an exhibition typing lesson taught by Dr. James Crawford of I.U.

Dona Miller and Ed Bailey interview Attorney General Edwin K. Steers as part of the government day field trip to the state and local offices.

Curriculum offerings provide for career and college requirements

Classroom periods are an hour of combined recitation and supervised study. Stan Martin and Diane Tramontini prepare U.S. History lessons in one room while, in another, Mr. McAuliffe's class discusses ancient history.



"To assist in the total development of the physical, social, and emotional well-being of the individual" was the goal set up by the Physical Education Department. In a two-year required course, a variety of activities such as basketball, tumbling, tennis, archery, and volleyball provided wholesome exercise while contributing skills that could be used for leisure time. In a related course, Health and Safety, community and individual health problems and their possible solutions were discussed. Awareness of the value of good living habits to ensure a happy future was developed. An extensive Driver's Ed program not only helped pupils become skillful drivers, but it also acquainted them with traffic regulations and encouraged them to become courteous and considerate motorists on the highways.

The Industrial Arts Department provided an insight into the processes, procedures, and products of the common industries. Practical experience was gained in projects which were planned and constructed by class members. A new class, Metal Crafts, was added the second semester. Both leisure time activities and profitable skills were developed.

As a part of the extensive driver education program, Tom Verplank and Katherine Price obtain practical experience in changing a tire.

Mrs. Dunlap demonstrates basketball techniques to pupils Jane Vogel, Judy Roberts, Shirley Stunkel, Carolyn McFarland, Susie Davidson and Sandy Cameron.

Training in skills important in modern progressive school

Instruction in Fine Arts completes good curriculum

Kathy Dozal and Mary Ann Hartz become proficient in the useful art of planning, preparing, and serving food.

Aware that academic subjects alone are inadequate preparation for the diversified and gregarious life North Centralites will lead in what has truly become "one world," the administration provided music, art, and Home Ec classes for training in grace of living. Enrollment steadily increased in the Music Department where pupils learned to understand and appreciate the best in all types of music while enjoying a relaxing mode of self-expression. Young artists found outlet for their talents in a variety of projects ranging from creation of simple designs to construction of intricate sculptures, paintings, and ceramics. Home Ec girls discovered the many factors that go into successful management of a happy home, while practicing skills in cooking and sewing that would make them better homemakers of the future. Family living classes gave them pride in their careers as home "psychologists and technicians."

Kathy Markey demonstrates the modern laundry that is provided in the home economics completely furnished home.

Making one's own clothes is an economical way to an extensive wardrobe, Anita Ditzenberger and Linda Haislup find.

To make a bed properly requires a skill that Judy Henry and Sue Woods receive in their course in Home Nursing.

Working with clay to sculpture a variety of objects is part of the training in fine arts that gives Carol Smith, Kathleen Boyer, and Bob Thomas a creative outlet while perfecting them in skills that may serve as a career.

OTHER INTERESTS BALANCE ACADEMICS

The field in which changes were least felt was that of awards and of those extra-curricular activities which, over a four year period, had become traditional and therefore varied only in the matter of winners' names and of current theme changes.

Tom Ransburg, yearbook photographer, and Barbara Colby, assistant editor of the yearbook, are the 1960 winners of the Merle Sidner Journalism award.

Nancy Campbell, later elected Student Council vice-president; accident victim Bill Sims; Dick Best; and Jim Gilson, elected '61 president, announce their candidacies to Jerry Miller, head of election proceedings, and Marjie Gaskill and Fred Cook, clerks. Voting followed the national pattern, even to using regular machines.

"Madame President's" secretaries were Carolyn Light, Susan Emmel, Barbara Skinner, Pam Anderson, Beth Marschke, Sherrill Mullikan, Ann Eberhardt, and Tammy McCready.

The joys and the sorrows, from cuts to the finale, leave a marked effect on everyone's memories.

Costumes in brilliant hues; a gleaming spotlight, luminous back drops; exciting rhythm from both the pit band and stage combos; costumed actors beating a path from the upstairs dressing rooms to their proper places in the wings; all add up to the biggest event of the year—the Junior Spectacular.

Although anyone in school can perform in the Spectacular, members of the Junior Class do the planning, writing of acts, ushering, and serving on various committees. Nancy Campbell and Diane Tramontini worked with faculty co-ordinators, Mrs. Dunlap and Mr. Martin this year, on production details. Miss Mullen and Mr. Meek, Junior Class sponsors, co-operated with class officers, Dick Best, Jim Gilson, Carolyn Riddell, and Bruce Peters, in planning.

Acts surviving cuts were "Another Opening," whose Umbrella Line tied with "Island Rhapsody" for Best Girl's Line Award; "A Mummy Dun Ptolemy" with the winning boy's Slave Line; "Shamrock Shenanigans" whose leprechauns were acclaimed the best Couples Line; and "Madame President" with two awards, one for Best Act and the other for Best Solo Award given Deanna Burghard, who played the lead.

Deb-tones, Linda Hirt, Karen Lemaster, and Julie Wilson, a singing trio who have been together since before high school, and who are now cutting records professionally, opened the show. Don Foley's band, popular for both school and outside dances, won the best intermission Act award. Don and the Deb-tones graduated in June. The Coachmen and the retract from "Cornpone's Act" were the other between scenes acts.

Royalty exists in a democracy, at least as far as North Central is concerned. The selection of kings and queens for various events is a cherished tradition. They reign over the Military Ball sponsored by the ROTC, the Fall Sports Dance by the Student Council, and over the Junior Prom. The latter is probably the most important event of the year, outside the Junior Spectacular. Beautifully dressed girls in colorful outfits and polished looking boys in tuxes spend a gala evening, usually at the Indiana Roof. Other dances, the Military Ball, the Fall Sports Dance, the Christmas Dance (given by the Student Council) and the Sweetheart Dance (by the sophomores) are held in the school's Student Center. Each sponsoring group works long hours to transform the marble-lined circular entrance hall into a fairyland that carries out its particular theme. Student mixers, set up by various organizations for money making purposes, are also part of the entertainment picture. In the spring, when yearbooks are issued, hordes of people attend the Autograph Party, sitting on floors, steps, and chairs, or just milling around signing books as rapidly as possible.

Public appearances aid in development of poise

Leading characters in this year's spring play, Judy Beaver, Cindy Bauer, and Dick Osborn look at costumes.

North Centralites are, for the most part, unusually well-poised, due to frequent opportunities to appear before the public, both at home and at school. Plays, musical productions, debates, and various other events provided occasions for many people to participate. The Drama Department put on "The Egg and I" in the fall and "I Remember Mamma" in the spring, the latter being the first second-semester play to be staged at North Central. Debaters were quite active this year, engaging many schools in friendly rivalry, and taking part successfully in district, regional, and state meets. Additional practice was given members of the student body who introduced most of the convocation or seminar speakers.

The Music Department accepted frequent invitations to appear at affairs outside the school. For the student body, a Spring Choral was given in May, a Bandarama between semesters, and an impressive Christmas program before the holidays. At the Family Jamboree, a Triangle Club-sponsored money-making project, Mr. Martin's vocal groups presented a capsule version of "Carousel." For all productions, members of the Stage Crew Club performed miracles of construction and backstage management.

A shadow pantomine of Lincoln's life and a Band-O-Rama are two of the special shows put on for North Centralites.

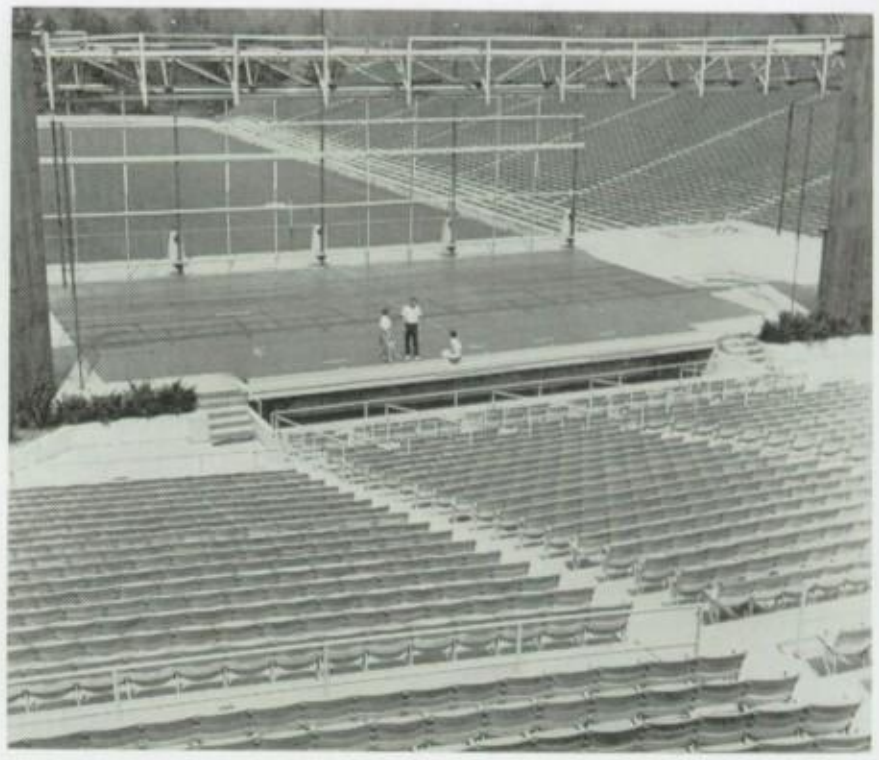
Working together for many weeks, parents and pupils planned and put on the annual Jamboree. B wing, the auditorium, gym, library, and Student Center were filled with sales booths, game areas, a style show, and a musical production.

Nanci Nail takes advantage of the opportunity to talk with the admissions representative from Northwestern University, Darrell Morris.

Meeting and talking with Dr. Emens, president of Ball State Teacher's College and his administrative assistant is an interesting and rewarding experience for Barbara Colby.



Because of its size, the '60 class held its graduation in Butler University's outdoor Theatron, the fieldhouse to be used as an alternate location in case of rain.

Only Four-Year Class at N.C.' title reserved for '60 seniors

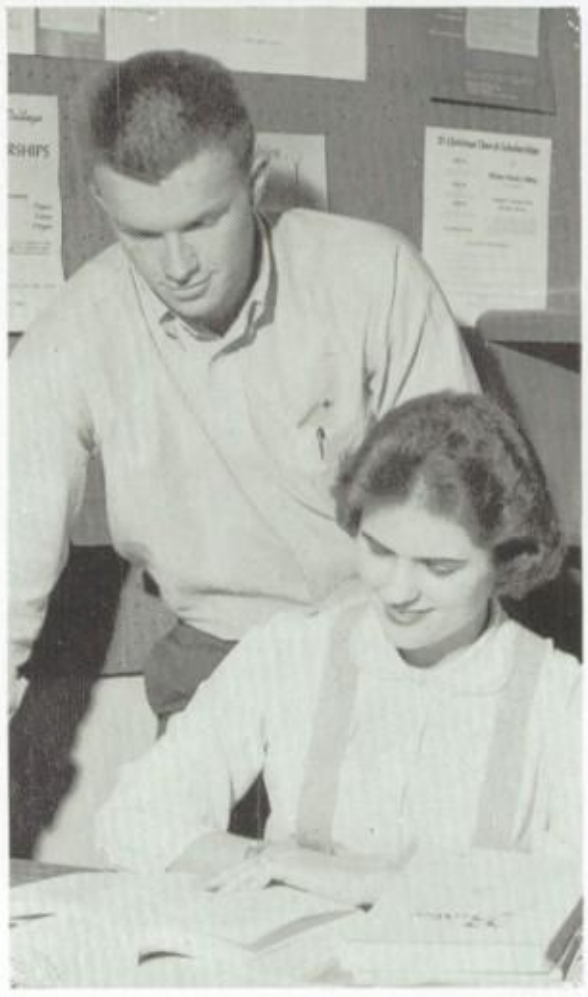
This year's Senior Class, unique as the only group to attend North Central four years, "opened" the school as freshmen with sophomores and juniors the only other classes. The following year, freshmen remained in junior high schools and North Central's first senior class was formed.

The '60 class members, 479 strong, were outstanding academically, a large percentage of them making the Honor Roll consistently. Nineteen semi-finalists in the Merit Scholarship program, the highest number in Indiana, became finalists.*

Homework, tests, projects, field trips, research, and explorative experimentation, done with initiative and skill, advanced their subject knowledge. Poise and leadership resulted from participation in dances, athletics, elections, dramatic productions, and publications. College and Career Days and instructive convocations impressed seniors with the challenge of the future.

Whit Warman, president, led the class. Jim Birr was vice-president; Betsy Traylor, secretary; and Jim Light, treasurer. Following an old tradition of girls wearing white robes, and boys, black, the '60 class set a new tradition by holding their commencement in an outside location, the Butler Theatron, a fact necessitated by the large size of the graduating group.

*Number winning scholarships not known at time of publication.



Phil Carson and Terry Cuthbertson, first and second in the Senior Class, are valedictorian and salutatorian for commencement exercises.

Seniors Judy Kinnear and Larry Hannah find that the last few days of high school are symbolized by a few exciting events: a last chat with the principal, a firm grip on the diploma, and a final exit with robes in hand.

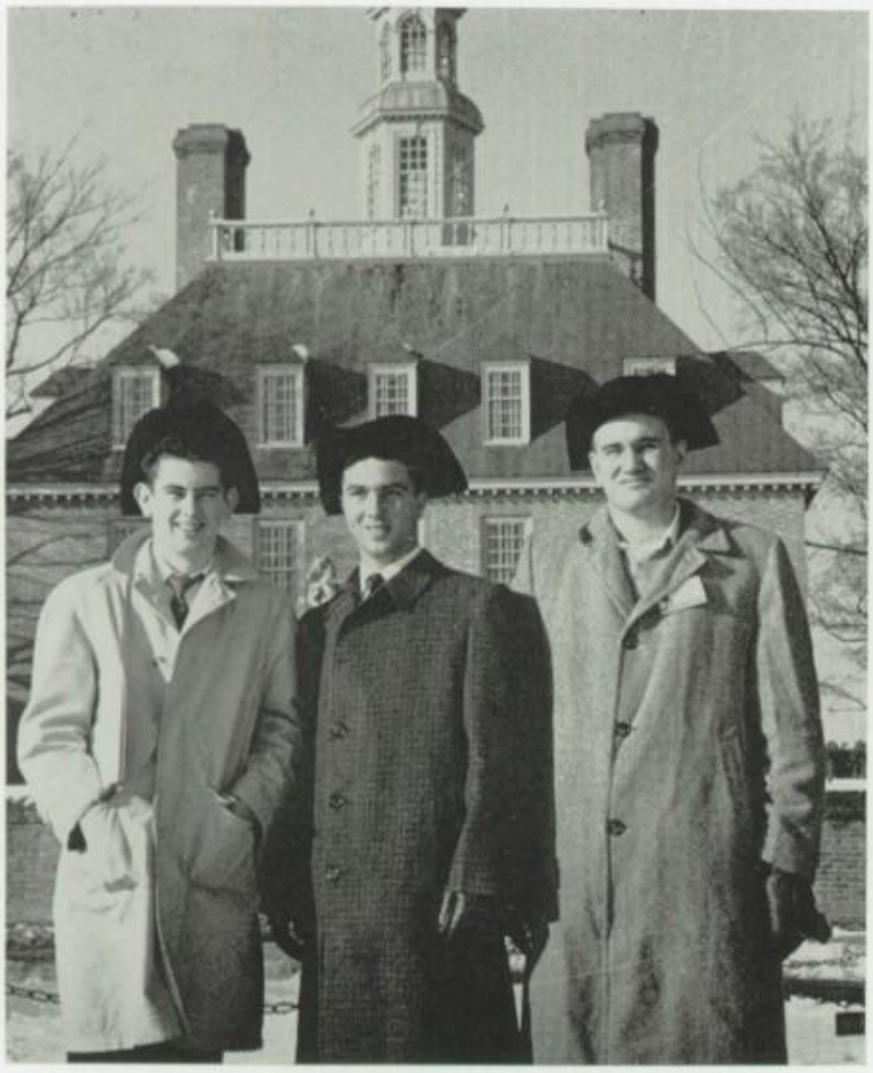
Student governing body serves as co-ordinating agency



Jerry Miller (right) representing the North Central Student Council at a meeting of the Williamsburg Student Burgess in the historic Virginia town, meets high school people from forty-seven states and twenty-two foreign countries, gathered to discuss the topic of "An Agenda for the New Age."

The Student Council, probably the largest and most important organization in North Central, met weekly to serve as a liason group between student body and the faculty. Specialized groups were set off within their membership, one being the Executive Council, which consulted with the administration and took over other projects which needed to be handled by a small group. Another was the Safety Council, which sponsored safety checks for student and faculty cars.

One of the most important functions of the Council was that of giving service to other groups in the school. Members distributed pictures for the Northerner, took charge of the Indiana High School District Forensic Contest, and sponsored College Day. Also, they arranged an orientation program for Eastwood and Westlane pupils, and promoted the use of a voting machine for large school elections. In the winter, the Student Council secured permission to open the school library for certain hours on Saturday, and also during the evenings of Spectacular practice to accommodate participants in the vaudeville.

Money-making projects included the Fall Sports Dance and the Christmas Dance. Part of the profits went into the school organ fund. Gene Cloncs, of the faculty, sponsored the group.

In an interview with Miss Mann, Student Council officers, Mark English, treasurer, Judy Gambill, assistant secretary, Don Foley, president, Judy Mendell, secretary, and Dave Richards, vice-president, thank the librarian for her cooperation in the council sponsored project of promoting Saturday library open-hours in addition to other available out of school time.

"Service for others" is the Key Club goal. Members set up various projects of a helpful nature and paid for them with proceeds from money-raising ventures.

The boys' two most important financing projects this year were a spaghetti dinner given after a performance of the Spectacular, and concession selling at all home football and basketball games. The club also sponsored School Spirit Week, helped a needy family at Thanksgiving, and provided financial support for North Central's Achievement Day program.

To qualify for membership, boys must maintain a 2.25 scholastic average and receive favorable recommendations from several teachers.

Officers for the Key Club were: Whit Warman, president; Bob Doane, vice-president; Jay Steele, treasurer; and Roger Nelsen, secretary. Wilbur Richards, faculty sponsor, directed the group.

Key Club members take turns selling at the concession stand outside the gym, during basketball games. A customer, Danny Johnson, is served by Larry Chesterfield and Bob Galm.

Honor Society membership goal of top students

Election to the National Honor Society is a top recognition coveted by outstanding juniors and seniors at North Central. Members are chosen on the basis of such qualifications as scholarship, leadership, citizenship, and character. Candidates are nominated from a list compiled from teachers' recommendations and are selected for membership by a special Honor Society committee vote. Following announcement of new members, a formal initiation ceremony is given before the entire student body at a spring convocation.

Activities this year included monthly meetings to which guest speakers were invited, a formal banquet in February for the members and their parents, and a reception for newly elected persons in the spring.

Pam DuBois served as the 1959-60 president. Roger Nelsen was vice-president; Cindy Bauer was the secretary; and Steve Hall, treasurer. Mrs. Ruth Kivett was the club sponsor.

Recognition comes to N. C. through honors awarded

As a blue ribbon winner in the Central Indiana Regional Exhibition of the National Scholastic Art Awards contest, Susan Moore (left) became eligible to enter national competition. Carol Engleman and Craig Reynolds (not shown) received honorable mention in the regional contest.

Recognition for outstanding work, or for exceptional talent, comes in various ways such as invitation to membership in honor organizations, or by individual prizes. The names of all persons honored are printed in a Recognition Day booklet for distribution to every one in school.

Honor groups included International Quill and Scroll, open to journalists, and National Thespians, for those earning points in dramatic and forensic activities. Quill and Scroll candidates must be in the upper third of the Junior or Senior Class, must have served for a year in a responsible position on a publication or on the News Bureau, and must be recommended by the sponsors. Both groups held formal initiation services for new members. Mrs. Kathleen Keilman sponsored Quill and Scroll and William Lord, the Thespians.

Other top pupils received individual recognition as the results of competitive participation in events outside the school. Two of these were the National Math and Scholastic Art contests.

Senior girls express gratitude through services

SENIOR GIRLS LEAGUE PLANNING BOARD—Dr. Alice Eagle, Katie Kohlstaedt, Lynne Umphrey, Sandy Elles, Dottie Henry, Judy Lookabill, and Judy Beaver. The Senior Girls League, which is made up of all senior girls, is a service club.

Graduating girls said "thank you" to North Central by taking an active part in the Senior Girls League, a service organization. Hostessing North Central's visitors was the major activity of the group, but members were also available to help in other projects at any time they were needed by the administration. Visiting groups such as school secretaries from all over Marion County, student teachers from Butler and other universities, and other groups have all been given "Cook's Tours" by these girls who are proud of their school and anxious to show it off. Members of the League aided representatives from various business fields who conducted seminars for Career Day. Also, the seniors ate lunch with newly enrolled pupils as a welcoming gesture from North Central to make them feel more at ease. Dr. Eagle, senior girls counselor, was sponsor.

Members of the Hi-Y Club sold candy as a money-making project, and the profit was given to the National YMCA for its building fund. The boys also ushered for various school activities throughout the academic year. In keeping with their purpose of Christian service to others, members opened and closed each meeting with a prayer.

Richard Campbell, program director of the Northside YMCA, was one of the speakers scheduled to talk to the group. He discussed the many services which will be provided at the new YMCA building which is being constructed across the street from the high school. Richard Vance sponsored the club.

Speech and Debate Clubs aid in oral

A small but enthusiastic group, Judy Beaver, Mr. Beasley, Craig Pinkus, and Bobbie Jo Cohen, members of the Forensic Club discuss a coming competition in which they are to take part.

Ability to speak fluently and with complete poise was the goal of North Central's two speech clubs, Extemporaneous Speech and Forensic. To achieve its objectives, the Extemporaneous Speech Club planned programs which included both class-prepared and assigned speeches. They also reserved certain meetings for impromptu speeches, members being called upon to give talks without previous preparation.

The Forensic group spent long hours preparing for intra-school and state-wide competition in poetry recital and dramatic and humorous interpretation. During March, club members were hosts for the Forensic District Meet at North Central. Arrangements for and the handling of this meeting were made by the Student Council.

Officers of the Extemporaneous Speech Club were: Craig Pinkus, president; Gordon Risk, vice-president; and Susan Hedback, secretary. Sponsor was Robert Siegel. Eugene Beasley sponsored the Forensic Club.

expression and public speaking competitions

The art of debate, when fully mastered, can be a great help for future success both in college and out of school. The debate team gained experience by engaging other high schools and colleges in organized arguments. Members also attended conferences at Butler and Purdue. The year's activities were climaxed by the District Contest of the Indiana High School Forensic Association held at North Central.

The Debate Club, a separate group, in the process of learning competitive public speaking, carried on a series of argumentative discussions throughout the year. Subjects included "Narcotics," "Labor Relations," "Red China," and "North Central Procedures," among others. Many meetings were entirely devoted to learning the techniques of debate.

To interest junior high pupils in debating, the team put on an assembly in Eastwood.

Debating is a strenuous activity, members of the Debate Club discover, as they listen to Bob Schloss, vice-president, Chuck Silet, president, and Gordon Risk, secretary.

North Central's large stage gives the Drama Club members an opportunity to gain actual experience "on the boards" while putting on a series of one-act plays. Staging these productions was one of the group's main projects for the year.

Drama groups become skilled in stagecraft, acting

Stage-struck Centralites found an outlet for their talents in the activities of the Drama Club. The group invited speakers to many of their meetings to provide the members with greater insight into the various aspects of acting and stagecraft. Fortified by the knowledge gained at these meetings, the club presented three one-act plays in February, "Pajama Party", "Crazy Violet", and "Rehearsal". All of these were student acted and directed. The spring play, "I Remember Mama", was another major project of the Drama Club.

An allied group, the Stage Crew, provided interesting backdrops and manned the intricate light-control switchboard at every production given on the school's large and well-equipped stage. Hard work not only provided an outlet for theatrical interest but developed in each of the crew a fuller understanding of co-operation and of group responsibility.

Mr. William Lord sponsored both the Drama Club and the Stage Crew.

Officers of the Drama Club plan their activities in a theatrical atmosphere on the stage. Bruce Peters is treasurer of the club; Sue Barlet, historian; Rae Hoppock, secretary; Sandi Larr, vice-president; Sue Hogan, president; and Mr. Lord, sponsor.

Planning how to manipulate the light control switchboard for a coming production are the officers of the Stage Crew, Sandi Larr, president; Alice Kingsbury, secretary; and Rollie Nail, vice-president. Missing is Bob Galm, treasurer.

Mrs. North and Mr. Heinig co-sponsored the club.

Great books and their authors set theme for clubs

A greater appreciation of the world's fine literature springs from a better understanding of it. To achieve this, members of North Central's two literary clubs, Authors and Great Books, met twice each month for analysis and discussion.

At each meeting of the Author's Club, a prominent writer and his works were reviewed. Literary figures chosen ranged from Jack London to Nietzche. Great Books Club operated in a similar manner. Readings were assigned in advance for thorough discussions at the following meeting.

Mr. Heinig and Mrs. North were the sponsors of the Author's Club; Sandy Kuhlman, was president. Mrs. Kraft was sponsor of the Great Books Club; Steve Gibbs, president, and Pat Rardon, secretary.

Newspaper deadlines important to young reporters

North Centralites who were involved in publishing the school newspaper, and girls enrolled in the News Bureau class, lived in a world bounded by deadlines and a constant search for the latest in news items. They shared a dislike of the sometimes monotonous polishing of stories, but all of them thrilled with pride at seeing the results in print.

Northern Lights staff members gathered school news and edited it for their bi-weekly publication which was produced in the school's print shop. Advisers John Shirley and Phillip Mann of the faculty co-operated on type setting and layouts. News Bureau people contributed a steady flow of publicity releases and feature stories to the city's four daily papers, receiving sizeable checks monthly for their efforts. Occasional invitations to publicity affairs provided young journalists with an opportunity to meet members of the working press. Mrs. Kathleen Keilman sponsored the News Bureau staff this year.

Yearbook offers training in business and personality

Publications play an important part in the life of a high school. Staff members become experienced in managing a business successfully while learning to apply the best journalistic principles to production of their yearbook or newspaper.

The Northerner staff worked "around the clock", starting with spring planning, continuing through summer blueprinting, and finishing the current book the following spring. Members were responsible for a budget of approximately $7,000, and for all of the intricate detail of preparing for publication—planning, cropping, and sending pictures to the engraver; writing and proofreading copy; pasting up dummies; and selling ads and copies of the book. The by-product for each person was tremendous growth in initiative, responsibility, cooperativeness, and in visualizing a finished product and carrying it through to completion. Mrs. Keilman was the Northerner's sponsor.

Editorial board members, Barb Colby, Tom Ransburg, and Carl Norman consult the NORTHERNER dummy they prepared at Indiana University Yearbook Institute last summer.

Interest sparked in language classes spreads to clubs

A shepherd joined Dave Evans, playing the part of Joseph and Kaaren Hellmers, as Mary, in a nativity scene, a Christmas tableau given for the Latin Club's Saturnalia.

Desiring to learn more about the particular country whose native tongue they were studying, boys and girls flocked to enroll in language clubs. Those in Latin Club learned more of the life and customs of ancient Rome by staging such ceremonials and celebrations as a slave sale, a simulated trip through Hades, and a spring Floralia. Miss Lesley, Miss Kinnison, and Mrs. Stokesberry were the faculty sponsors.

Movies, talks by guest speakers, and lectures by the group sponsor, Miss Mullen, were on the agenda for French Club. A featured guest was a representative from the Translation Department of Lilly's. German Club members held group discussions, or scheduled programs at which slides, photographs, and map displays were shown. Sponsor was John Harrison Brown.

A huge enrollment forced Spanish Club to form two sections, each having its own faculty sponsor. William Bugher was in charge of one of the groups, and John Wendling, the other. Individually, the clubs listened to Spanish music and played Spanish games; in a joint meeting they heard Mr. Vance, a North Central language teacher, talk about his trip to Mexico. A Spanish dinner, complete with all kinds of native food, provided a fitting conclusion for the year's schedule.

Officers of the French Club look over French songs distributed the last meeting before the Christmas holidays. Terry Cuthbertson is treasurer; Suzy Smith, vice-president; Alice Kingsbury, secretary; Susie Aycock, president; Miss Wahneta Mullen, French and Spanish sponsor.

Two similar clubs, Mu Alpha Theta and Math, met every other week to broaden and increase the members' interest in mathematics. Mu Alpha Theta is an honorary group for juniors and seniors presently taking math and achieving a B average or above. Guest speakers and students spoke at the club's meetings. A representative from Naval Avionics lectured on numerical analysis; Eric Norman's father on actuarial work in which math is involved; Eric on the binary number system; and Jay Steele on the fallacies of geometric processes.

When the Slide Rule Club exhausted the possibilities of this mathematical instrument, the group enlarged the scope of their activities to become the Math Club. At their meetings they discussed various phases of mathematics.

Allan Weinheimer sponsored Mu Alpha Theta; James Davidson and George Sharp, the Math Club.

Using a slide rule, President Bob Price (right) and Jeff White, recording secretary, explain the solution of a complicated problem to the Math Club.

Drawing from the pages of past and current history for topics resulted in fascinating discoveries and discussions, the Social Studies Club found. Members compared and contrasted the leadership methods of two outstanding dictators, Napoleon and Hitler. At other meetings, discussions centered around other great figures, ranging from Fidel Castro of present day Cuba to the Caesars during the Roman Empire. Prior to their acceptance in the union, the 49th and 50th states, Alaska and Hawaii, were the subjects of a club debate. Members became more interested in their chosen field after taking trips to such historical places near Indianapolis as the home of James Whitcombe Riley.

Kenneth Patton sponsored the club.

"Should the United States admit two new remote states?" This is the question to be debated by the three officers of the Social Studies Club, Sue Barlet, secretary, Steve Gibbs, president, and Mike Lewin, vice-president.

A trip to the Chicago Field Museum of Science and Natural History highlighted the activities of the Science Reading Club this year. This group meets twice each month to read and discuss matters pertaining to all phases of science. Members find the club program gives them time and resources needed for work on term papers assigned in their science classes. Also the group makes chemical and biological research any individual requests.

By sharing their knowledge of scientific study with others of like interests, Science Reading people definitely broaden their horizons.

Earl Lindberg sponsored the club.

People with such diverse interests as ham radio stations and fossils, found clubs suited to their particular likes. At each meeting of the Electronics Club, a member talked on some phase of the communications field, and a general discussion followed. A major project undertaken by club members was that of planning and operating a ham radio station. They also sponsored an after-game mixer as a money-making project, proceeds of which were to go toward buying a radio installation.

The Geology Club explored the world of rocks, minerals, and fossils, exhibiting and exchanging specimens. Members also banded together for field trips such as the one in May, to Southern Indiana.

Officers of the Geology Club were: Jeff White, president; Bill Anderson, vice-president; and Stewart Ruch, secretary. Sponsor was Robert Prettyman. Keith Mohr sponsored the Electronics Club.

Industrial and domestic hobbies furthered in clubs

Boys with hobbies relating to industrial processes shared their enthusiasm with other members of the Industrial Arts Club. Projects they had completed at home were brought to school and discussed at each meeting. Some of the special ones included radios and customized model cars made from intricate kits.

Home Economics Club members engaged in many interesting activities this year including filling baskets for needy families at Thanksgiving and Easter, planting a flower garden on the patio, sacking candy for the Salvation Army, and listening to a guest talk on the art of decorating hats.

Officers of the Industrial Arts Hobby Club were: Scotty Rabe, president; Jim Fick, vice-president; and Jared Chase, secretary. James Hunter sponsored this club. Miss Carolyn Kleifgen and Mrs. Margaret Stout were advisors for the Home Economics Club.

Home Economics Club second semester officers, Mary Lou Butler, sergeant-at-arms, Linda Haislup, president, Nancy Lepanon, vice-president, and Judy Hiatt, secretary-treasurer, plan ahead of time for interesting programs to be given the members.

Extra time for creative expression given students

Lack of time to complete creative projects during class periods, was the motivating force back of the formation of an Art Club. A variety of activities soon were underway as amateurs and "near-professional" artists set to work with enthusiasm during the club's activity period.

In addition to individual undertakings, members came to the aid of other organizations needing their particular talents. Junior Spectacular act chairmen called upon North Central's artists for collaboration with the Stage Crew in designing and painting backdrops for the show.

Other group activities included movies, special talks by commercial artists, and demonstrations of various media in the field of commercial fine art. In the spring, the Art Club sponsored the All-School Art Exhibit in which anyone could participate.

Officers were: Jerry Stafford, president; Rena Gold, secretary-treasurer; Peg Holm and Bob Morgan, program chairmen. James Keyt sponsored the club.

Working on a gigantic scale, painting backdrops for the Spectacular, is quite a change from their usual work, Jerry Stafford, Marsha Eck, and Jim Glore, members of the Art Club, find.

Officers (standing) Jerry Stafford, president, Rena Gold, secretary-treasurer, Peg Holm, and Bob Morgan, program chairmen, peek over the shoulders of fellow Art Club members Caryl Romberg, Linda Dorbecker, Joanne Schoneberger, Rosemary Chappell, and Kathie Schilling, who are making some impromptu drawings during one of the regular meetings. Members produced ceramics, statues and paintings.

Bowling is such a popular sport that club members Ronnie Bernstein, Gundar Aljens, Barry Woods, and Mitch Weber, (all seated) have to wait their turns at the alleys before getting a chance to play. Rick Roessler and Sandy Sutton keep a record of scores, and Norman Pozner, the president, checks to see that the strikes and spares are recorded correctly.

Excitement of competition sparks bowlers

Each Tuesday after school, the Town and Country Alleys buzzed with eager North Central bowling enthusiasts. Teams were organized among the members and these bowled against each other and against students of other schools, three games every week. Ten teams of three each made up the Bowling Club. One of the members, Bob Lang, rolled such outstanding games that he was invited to participate in the city-wide tournament. In April, the team competed against the faculty, resulting in a glorious Bowling Club victory and a humiliating faculty defeat.

Martin McAuliffe sponsored the club.

"Learning the proper techniques of bowling is the hardest part of the sport," declare members of the Bowling Club. Sharon Clarin finds that the proper stance is important in racking up a good score for her game.

Waching two boys absorbed in the fascinating and involved game of chess are Bill Frey, president, Mr. Campbell, and Fred Wolters, secretary-treasurer. Players concentrating on their next moves are Phil Jones, vice-president, and Dave Durlacher.

Military History Club members shared the unusual privilege of having as their sponsor General DeBard, a man with the rank of general, one who had seen foreign service. He was able to impart his enthusiasm for his hobby of Military History to the boys and to give them a thorough briefing on army life. "Atomic Warfare" and the advancement being made in the missile field were typical subjects discussed at each meeting. Occasional guest speakers, movies, and displays of models of various types made up the programs.

Another new group, the Chess Club, enjoyed its meetings thoroughly because they were spent in matches played against one another. When they felt sufficiently successful the members challenged players from Southport to come to North Central for a session. This led to an invitation to the spring tournament at Southport. Bill Frey was president of the group; Phil Jones, vice-president; and Fred Wolters, secretary-treasurer. Morris Campbell sponsored the club.

Pupils serious about the teaching profession join FTA

Carolyn Sheets, president, holds a committee meeting with Cynthia Kenney, secretary, Sally Smith, vice-president, Janet Morgan, treasurer, Suzy Smith, historian, and with Mrs. Marie North, who is their sponsor. This group was a very active career organization.

The Future Teachers Association added a new objective this year, deciding to encourage boys to think seriously of teaching as a profession. Eugene Cloncs assisted Mrs. Marie North, sponsor of the club, in this endeavor. The group's cadet teaching program, a class open to any student, was also a major project. Pupils enrolled in this course gained practical on-the-job experience by assisting at Nora school.

At their club meetings, members heard speakers from the profession including Edward Heinig, chairman of North Central's English Department, and David Adams, principal of Nora Grade School.

Nancy Powell, vice-president of FTA, elected when Sally Smith moved away, helps three pupils at the Nora Cottage as part of her duties as a student teacher.

Girls enrolled in the Future Nurses Club spent enjoyable times in activities related to their chosen profession.

Services for the Red Cross were performed at every other meeting. At the international organization's request, North Central girls made Christmas, Saint Patrick's Day, and Valentine's Day favors for parties given to hospitalized children. A comic book drive was also held for the same purpose.

During regular activity periods, FNA girls heard speakers who represented various phases of nursing. Miss Fick from Indiana University's School of Dentistry, and representatives from Saint Vincent Hospital's School of Nursing, were among those who talked to the club. Films were also shown from time to time.

Miss Mary Doyle sponsored the FNA.

During March one of the FNA's projects was to make party favors for the Lutheran Orphanage Home. Tammy McCready, Phyllis James, Janet Morgan, and Gayle Dilatuch are preparing Saint Patrick's Day favors for the children.

Organizing the FBLA coat check procedures was a pre-game routine for Carolyn Smitha, reporter-historian, Judy McLerran, secretary, Mrs. Carol Green, Danny Johnson, treasurer, Barbara Porter, president, Judy Stange, second vice-president, Mrs. Edith Reese, and Jacquie Grebe, first vice-president. This was one of the organization's main money-making projects.

Business-bound pupils gain experience in FBLA

Intending to use positions in the business world as careers, members of the local chapter of the Future Business Leaders of America carried on an active program of becoming acquainted with their chosen field. They invited speakers to their meetings, among whom were Indianapolis secretaries and executives, along with two of the Business Education Department teachers, Mrs. Reese and Miss Warner. At one session, members pantomimed the procedures used in getting a job—both the right and the wrong way.

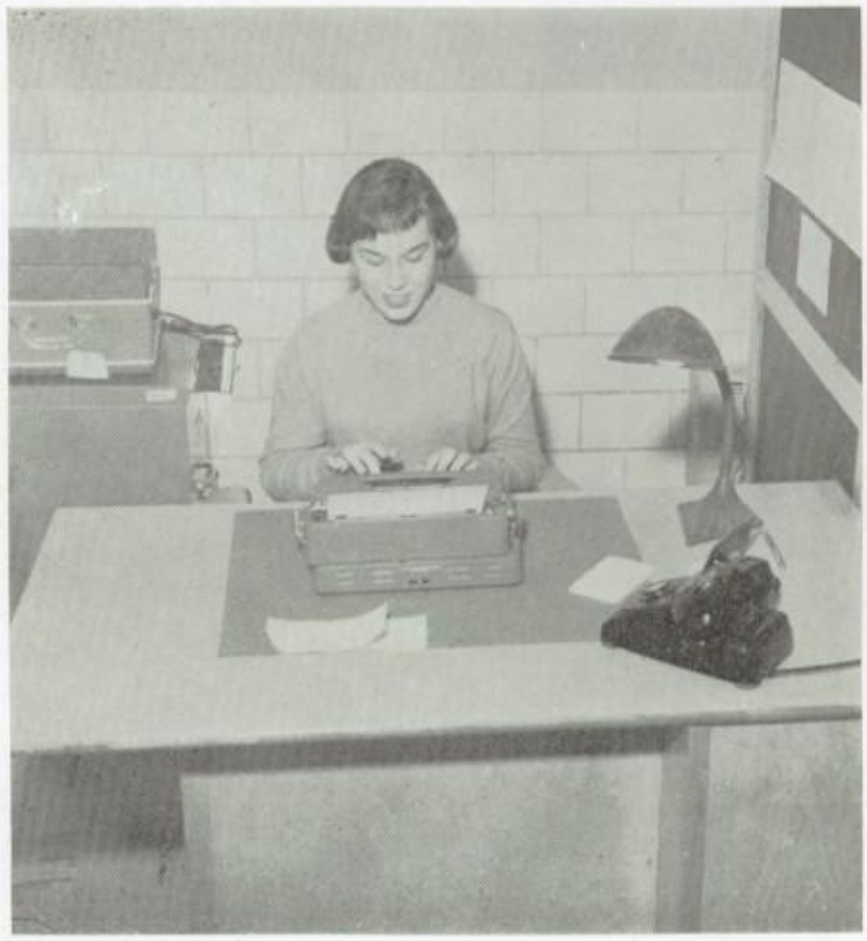
The state convention held at Ball State Teachers College attracted a large group from North Central. Barbara Porter, elected state historian last year, served as an officer for the last time, but the school retained a representation on the governing board. Jean Grossart ran for and was chosen state reporter. In the NOMA spelling contest the team of Becky Greenwood, Lynne Umphrey, and Carol Jones placed third.

When chapters from all over Indiana gathered at Ball State last spring. Barbara Porter successfully campaigned for the office of state historian.

Assistants provide clerical aid for busy teachers

Assistants to the faculty and administration played a vital role in the operation of North Central. Their work helped relieve busy teachers of many burdensome routine chores.

Department assistants, stationed in counselling rooms for the most part, performed a variety of tasks for their particular assignment, duties ranging from extensive typing to watering the plants that made each small room atractive. The girls were on hand to assist teachers of the department and to answer the phone. Delivering passes, filing, operating the switchboard, and counting paper clips were only a few of the duties performed by general office assistants. Counsellors found many tasks for their helpers to carry out in the guidance offices including filing and other clerical work. The school nurse depended upon her student assistants to keep records, answer the phone, and run errands when necessary.



Taking care of the business department office is a responsibility which occupies Patti Farmer's time two periods a day.

Judy Lookabill (left), office assistant, checks a student registration card for necessary information. Miss Doyle (center), school nurse, uses her helper, Patti Young, for an errand. (right) The files of the guidance office are kept orderly for Kenneth Warren by his assistant, Mary Hawes. These pupils proved invaluable aids to busy teachers. Marianne Guyton appraises the new N.C. emblem as she gossips with Karen Stauber, bookstore assistant. Susie Steers (right) rings up Sharon Hart's purchases.

The bookstore, laboratories, and attendance office were kept in smooth working order by student assistants.

Bookstore helpers become adept at locating articles for customer purchases and acquired a proficiency in rapid money-changing. They were an invaluable aid to Mrs. Kennedy, permitting her a release from most "behind the counter" work.

In the midst of pickled specimens, chemicals, and intricate apparatus, the laboratory assistants worked. They performed clerical jobs such as labeling and filing.

Delivering passes to pupils whose absences were under question, collecting attendance slips from each room door, and answering the telephone were the main duties of the attendance assistants.

Selling, attendance, lab procedures aided by assistants

Keeping the library in efficient operation and ready for student use was the responsibility of members of the Library Club. Little did the average North Central-ite realize, when he hurriedly checked out a book, that back of this simple procedure was intricate card filing, cataloguing, and upkeep to be done on his book. Also, the neat shelves were due to the patient "housekeeping" of the librarians and their assistants. Members of the club took field trips to Central and State Libraries to become further acquainted with library procedures.

Another service club, Audio-visual Aid Technicians, sent its members scurrying about the building to provide classes, clubs, and stage productions with audio-visual devices. A mixer was held to finance storage shelves in the library AVT room and to purchase a two-way communications system.

Mrs. Katherine Wert and Miss Mary Louise Mann sponsored the Library Club, Frank Rhea, the AVT.

The combined musical groups presented three outstanding performances for the school; the fall production, Carousel, given at the Family Jamboree and starring Kitty Grummann and Avie Celander; the Christmas Pageant and Festival; and the Spring Music Festival.

Divisions of the Choral Department consisted of two girls groups, Belles and Choral Club, and two mixed groups, A Capella and Counterpoints. Each of these made frequent guest appearances both locally and out of town. The Music Department's division of instrumental music was centered in the concert, marching, and dance bands.

During the fall months the marching band provided half-time entertainment at football games. In the spring they performed at the NDCC Federal Inspection. During the year they won a first division rating in the Indiana School Music Association Marching Band Contest.

A first division rating was given the concert band, also, when they took part in the ISMA's Concert Band Contest. Individual awards were won by members of the band in the ISMA's Solo and Ensemble Contest.

A bright and colorful addition to the Marching Band's performances were the Northern Starlets, a group of precision baton twirlers, trained by Carol Henzie. This was their first appearence at North Central. All of the bands combined to put on a Band-o-Rama between semesters in January and to provide a pit band for the Junior Spectacular and the Spring Festival in May. The last appearance of the group was at commencement at the close of school.

School spirit reflected in enthusiasm of student

Approximately a hundred girls form a special cheering group which travels with the team to add encouragingly lusty yells to the excitement. Seated together in a special part of the bleachers, the girls accompany their cheers with a series of precision drills.

Each Wednesday the group met to practice old yells and learn new ones. Mrs. Margaret Dunlap and the cheerleaders were on hand to supervise. To create unusual effects, the girls wore jerseys which were red in front and white in back. Thus they could form a variety of patterns by leaning over or turning around so as to display either the red or the white on their shirts. Small, casual hats of white and white gloves completed the costume.

At all regular basketball games, the county tournament, and the sectionals, the girls of the Block Section added to the excitement of "hardwood hysteria." Many times the section was accompanied in its cheers by the pep band, sponsored by Robert Schlatter, band director.

Margie Bitner, Judy Edwards, and Donna Merritt, senior assistants, check off the shirts used by the Block Section, as the garments are turned in at the end of the season.

Variety of sports included in intramural program

The intramural sports program has as its objective "athletics for all". It gives boys and girls opportunity for participation in a wide range of sports activities including football, basketball, volleyball, and ping-pong. In setting up the program four leagues were formed with a number of teams in each.

When the final scores were tallied, the "Frogs", captained by Jim Stewart, became undisputed champions of the Junior-Senior League by winning eight out of nine games. The Sophomore League in basketball was won by the "Jets" who edged out the "Buzzards" for the championship.

In the 1960 Intramural Touch Football League, the undefeated B 34 Bombers finished with a 6-0 in league play.

The B 34 Bombers were acclaimed as champions of the boys' division and the Bouncers won the girls' division for the Intramural Volleyball League.

For the second year in a row Ann Weiderecht won the girls' ping-pong championship and Mike Corey, the boys'.

Thomas Bradley was Intramural Director.

In both volleyball and basketball the round sphere is the center of attention. (top), Boys vie for the toss-up at the start of a brisk game. (bottom) Priscilla Colville smashes a drive across the net in a hot volleyball match.

Senior members of the Intramural Council met periodically to plan the school's intramurals. Mr. Bradley, Intramural Director, asks Jeanne Berridge, Jim Adams and Sue Barlet for suggestions about the forthcoming all-school ping pong tournaments.

Officers of both boys' and girls' gymnastic clubs get together with Mr. Smith, sponsor, to discuss rules of safety. North Centralites who enrolled in the Gymnastics Club found meetings invigorating changes from the study routine. Whether it be swinging from a rope, flying high above a trampoline, or working out on mats, these people enjoyed the benefits of gymnastic activities throughout the year. Their strenuous program built strong bodies and alert minds.

William Smith, North Central's football coach, sponsored the Gymnastics Club.

The National Defense Cadet Corps is a vital part of the school, preparing boys for easier adjustment to service "hitches" which will later be required of them. A familiarity with weapons, discipline, military terms, combined with an extensive program of drills, make up the course. Charles Smith held the top position of Battle Group Commander. The chief organizing board was the Battle Group Staff with Major Richard Allen as executive officer. The Army Staff Council, composed of representatives from each cadet class, met also as an organization body.

This year, six rifle teams participated in intramural competition. The Color Guard officiated at all games as well as at parades and other extra-curricular activities. Cadets volunteered to serve on traffic detail throughout the year and efficiently directed cars into parking lots during night functions. They also acted as guards at a United Nations Conference held at the State House. Federal Inspection and the Military Ball were events requiring much preparation and hard work. Diane Collier reigned as Ball queen.

Smithmen reap top newspaper publicity with stunning

. . . "one of the finest in Marion County football history beyond a doubt" . . . Indianapolis Star 10/31/59

. . . "The Panthers who had only one touchdown scored against them by a county team were probably the most explosive County Champions in history." . . . Indianapolis Times 11/29/59

. . . "As one coach said, 'I like that North Central line . . . and I could use that backfield!" . . . Indianapolis News 11/21/59

These were only a few of the comments published in Indianapolis newspapers as North Central's Panthers roared toward the close of a spectacular season.

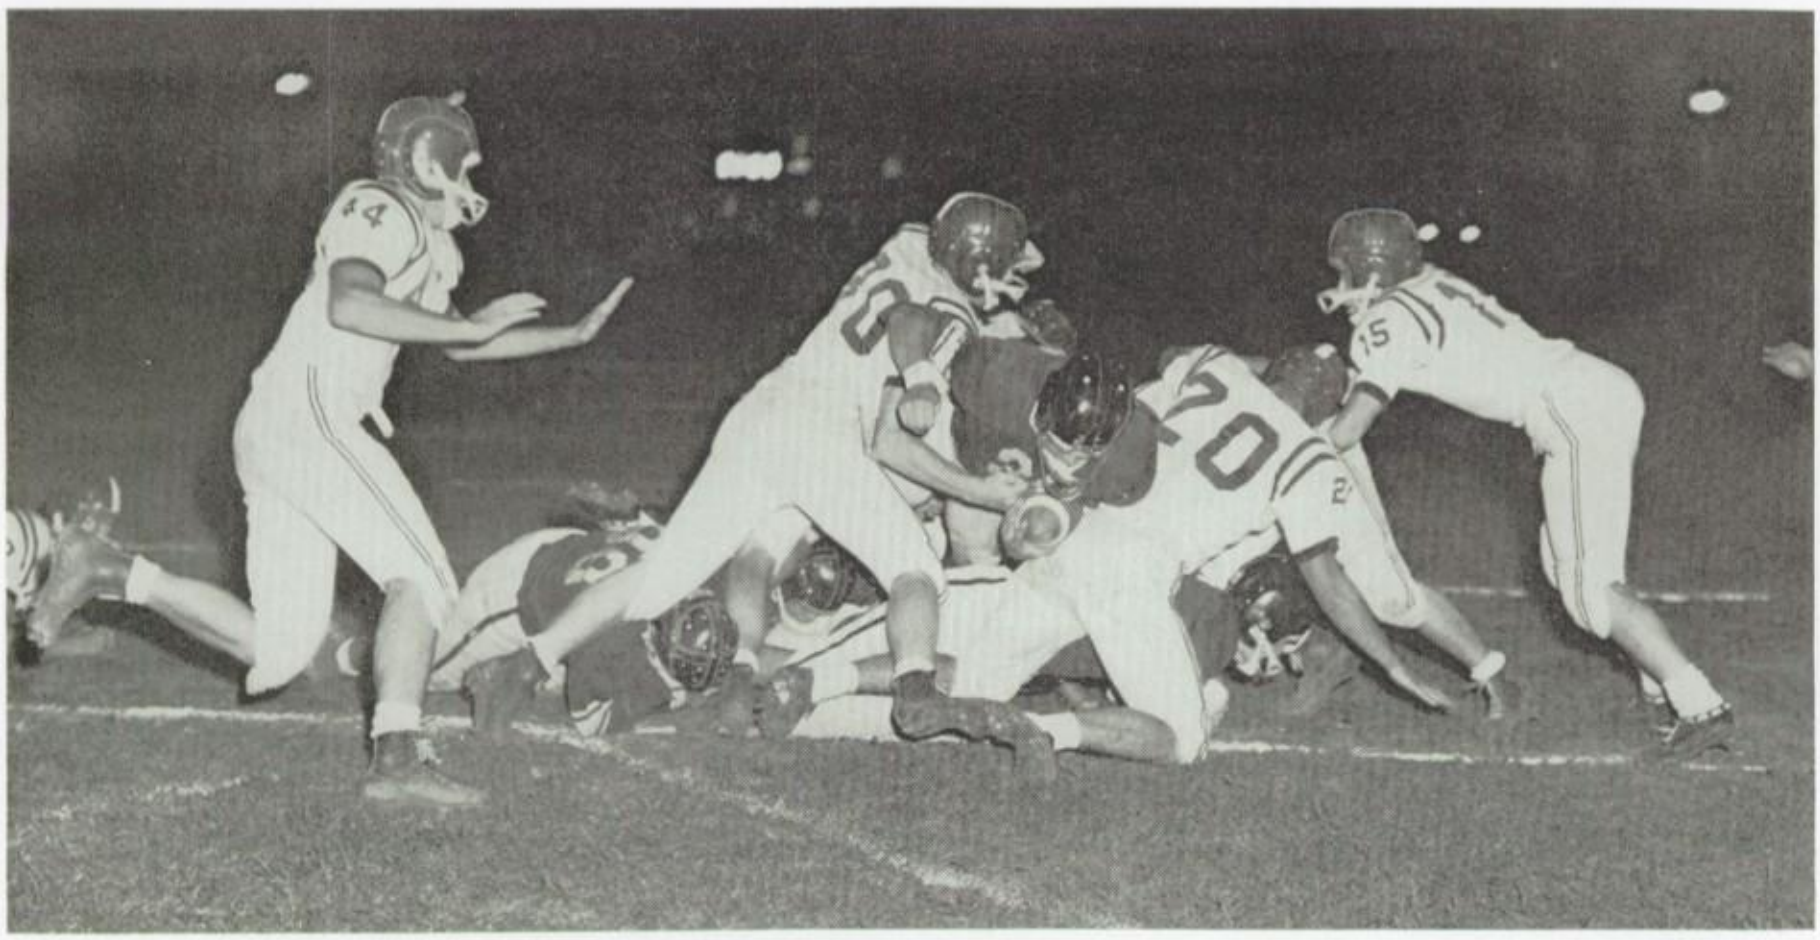
Beginning the best year in North Central's short gridiron history, the team opened its 9-1 season by outlasting North Central Conference powerhouse, Kokomo, 28-21. The following week Brownsburg invaded the North Central stadium and took home a 60-6 loss at the hands of the indomitable Panthers, who set a new single game scoring record.

The next four weeks were a coach's dream as the Panthers rolled victoriously over Noblesville, Lawrence Central, Ben Davis, and Warren Central while running up an overall score of 137-0. This also set another new record, Coach Smith's Panthers now had eleven straight wins.

The only defeat of the season came at the hands of fast, unbeaten Howe on a muddy Tech Field. The Panthers held a 14-0 edge at half time, but Howe made a come-back in the third and fourth quarters. By virtue of superior passing ability, the Hornets pulled 19 points out of "thin air" and stunned the North Central fans with a 19-14 outcome.

The team not only recovered, but outdid themselves by routing Southport 33-0 for the County A-League crown, punishing Lawrence Central a second time, 32-6, this time for the County Championship, and defeating Elwood, 47-12, all within the short period of one week.

The Panthers were sparked by an unrivaled team spirit, which showed to advantage in the County Championship game. In that contest, trailing by 6 points, the team was pushed back to inside their own five yard line. Then as if lightning had struck, they came to life and not only equalled Lawrence Central's score but slammed across 18 more points before the crack of the gun marking the end of the half.



With characteristic brilliance, the Panther line smashes an opening through the Southport wall to give fullback Jim Birr a straight road home as the team chalks up another tally in their 33-0 whitewash of the traditionally tough Cardinals.

The 1960 football team's success probably stemmed from the fact that its members were individually possessed of unusual ability. However they did not try to act as individuals — the team's welfare came first always and a smoothly functioning unit was the result. This accounted for North Central being represented by more people than any other school on the newspapers' All-County Team selections. Those recognized by the Indianapolis Times include Mark English, Ed Krause, and Don Morrison from the line, and representing the backfield were Steve Tegarden, Bob Enoch, Jack Schroeder and Jim Birr.

Appreciation for the boys who made 1960 athletic history was expressed in a poem delivered by Coach Carl DeBard at the final football assembly.

The Greeks of old, so I am told
Were men of might and muscle,
But North Central men nine out of ten
Can make those old Greeks hustle.

At a special banquet many individual awards were given team members. Leading the varsity letter winners was Jim Birr, who won his fourth football award. With the present set-up of a three year program, he will be the only boy to receive that many awards.

Receiving their third year varsity awards were linemen Ed Krause, Jimm Light, Don Morrison, and Mike Smith. Winning their third year awards from the backfield were Steve Tegarden and Paul Vaughn.

With an unbeaten reserve team returning next year, the varsity has a tremendous potential with which to carry on North Central's new football tradition.

Reserve gridders post undefeated record

The 1959 football season was especially significant for the North Central Reserve Panthers who achieved their first perfect record. Coaches Walt Viellieu and Carl DeBard tutored the team to six victories and no defeats against stiff competition.

The Panthers easily romped over Ben Davis, Noblesville, Lawrence Central, and Speedway, before capturing the season's two final games from Warren Central and Southport by identical 14-12 scores. Conquering the Southport Cardinals, the boys became County Reserve Football Champs for the first time in their short history as a team.

The Reserve's play was not only characterized by outstanding offensive and defensive work, but also by fine sportsmanship. Offensively, the team racked up a total of 126 points, while holding their opponents to 51. Cooperation as a team and the will to win on the part of each member accounted for the fine record, since no boy's performance was more outstanding than that of his teammates.

All the boys from this year's undefeated team are returning next year, which promises a bright future for the varsity on which many of the present reserve Panthers will play. Because the team is largely composed of sophomores who played last season at Eastwood and Westlane Jr. High School, further support is given to the varsity outlook since these boys will be on tap for two more years.

Captain Brad Waltman leads his teammates on a two mile tramp across the waterlogged fairways of South Grove Golf Course. During the three-way meet, the N. C. harriers finished second to state champion, Anderson, despite the steady downpour that hampered progress.

Plagued by graduation losses in the beginning, the '59 cross-country team gained enough momentum to end the season second in the county after a mediocre beginning. In the final meet of the season with Anderson and Shortridge, the state's top two teams, the hill and dale men made their hard work and long practice hours pay off by pulling into second place.

Although he will be minus the help of nine graduating seniors, Coach Charley Riley feels that with the assistance he will receive from this year's highly regarded county champion reserve team, next year's team will be assured of reaching the peak of its potentialities.

Rounding the half-way mark, reserve thinlyclad Charley Hall builds up steam before dashing around an Anderson runner.

Panthers finish season with 13-10 record

"Hoosier Hysteria" took a firmer grip on North Central during the '59-'60 season as the Panther team proved itself to be a strong competitor. The boys wrote many new entries in the North Central basketball ledger while setting up a 13-10 record.

At the beginning of the long campaign, the team started with expectations of carrying on the precedent of winning set by the football team. Until Christmas vacation it looked as though they might go all the way with a fine record. Wins over Zionsville, Warren Central, Carmel, Lawrence Central, Martinsville, city arch-rival Broad Ripple, and county powerhouse, Southport, strengthened this belief. The only pre-holiday losses went to Elwood and visiting Kokomo. Spectator interest reached its peak when the North Central gym was filled past its 2300 seat capacity for the first time, during the contest with Kokomo.

The winning streak ended as the holidays arrived. The team was as cold as the weather when its members returned to school in January. They found it difficult to rekindle the old fire that had warmed the hearts of the N. C. fans the first semester, but were able to recover enough to be slated for the championship game of the county tournament by defeating Beech Grove and a greatly improved Lawrence Central team. However in the final game the Panthers could not overcome the proficiency of the Southport Cardinals and were edged out 45-43 in a thrilling overtime struggle.

For the rest of the season the team was plagued by loss of spirit and injuries to some of its members, the most severe being the back injury that sidelined front-wall strong man Chuck Poland until the Sectional. The Panthers claimed victories over Ben Davis, Lebanon, and Washington, while losing to Manual, Speedway, Crawfordsville, Madison Heights, and Frankfort.

Sectional time brought high hopes to North Centralites. The Panthers easily conquered the Deaf School, before meeting Shortridge. Outstanding effort and superb ball handling resulted in a tight and exciting game but Shortridge seized its opportunities and squeezed out a close victory.

As one newspaperman said, "If North Central had played all season the way they did against Shortridge they would have been a top team in the state."

As tension mounts, third year varsity mainstay, Bill Johnson, pours in two more important points in the North Central attempt to dethrone defending county champion, Southport.

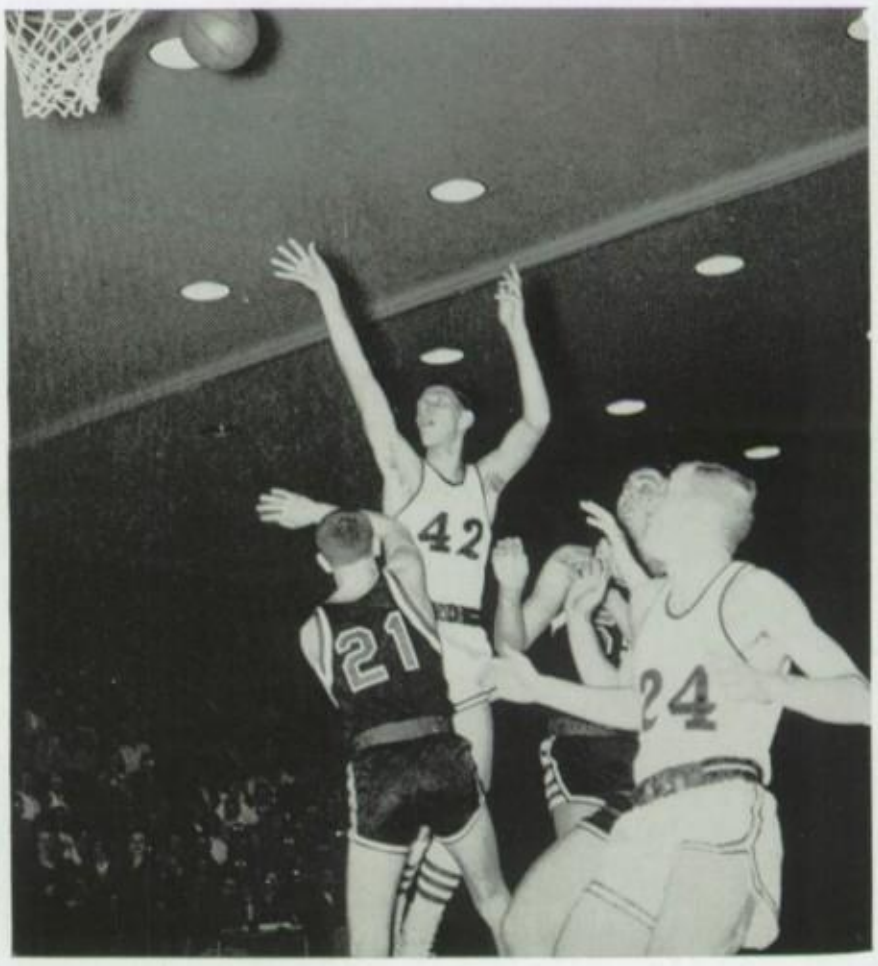
Lanky 6-5 junior, Mike Chapman, leaves a cluster of Manual Redskins bewildered as he rockets up to dunk in a two-pointer during the Panther contest with the city champs.

Reserve stalwart Morgan Everson builds the Panther lead with the addition of two more points during a crucial game.

Faking the Frankfort defense off guard, Panther cub, Bill Campbell, takes an easy jump shot to post the score up two more points.

Giving Panther fans something to cheer about, Avie Celender propels the ball toward the hoop for a two-pointer.

Varsity standout Bill Johnson flings a crib shot at the basket, making a frantic effort to extend the Panther lead.



The 1959-1960 basketball season saw the North Central reserve basketball team rack up a superlative account of itself while registering a 17-3 record. One of the highpoints of the year was the subduing of the mighty Lebanon reserves, who had previously been victorious in fifty-seven consecutive games. Another worthy moment for the Panther Cubs came when they garnered their first County Championship.

The season's setbacks were suffered at the hands of three of the strongest teams in the state, Elwood, Kokomo, and Washington.

One of the important functions of the team is to serve as a training camp for the varsity, which in this case was a life-saver as nine seniors were lost by graduation. Led by a majority of sophomores and a few juniors, the reserves provided a bevy of talented players for the 1961 season.

to '59-'60 varsity wrestling squad

Coach Walt Viellieu led his North Central wrestlers to a 9-5 record in their third consecutive winning season. Much hope is held for next year's team which will be bolstered by the return of many boys who wrestled for the reserve squad this year.

Powered by eight lettermen the team captured its best record since 1958. Winning their first letters were Seniors Joe Walsmith, Jim Kinch, Mickey Maurer, and Junior Rol Donie. Ed Krause and Larry Braun picked up their second letters, while Jack Mendell and Phil Shaver won their third and fourth awards.

One of the outstanding performers of the year was bantam-weight Jack Mendell, who won fifteen straight matches before losing a close decision in the Sectional Meet. As a fitting climax to this record, "Little Jack" was elected team captain at the end of the season. Another boy to whom recognition is due is Phil Shaver, who won his fourth letter.

The wrestling season was highlighted by impressive wins over Madison Heights, Decatur Central, Beech Grove, Frankfort, and Franklin Township, while narrow margin victories were squeaked out over Lawrence Central, Marion, Scecina Memorial, and Manual.

The nucleus for next year's team should be formed by Rol Donie, Allen Kearns, Dan Early, Mike Gunason, and Dormon McShan. Other varsity hopefuls include Mike Sweeney, John Edgington, Kurt Stevens, Bill Hunt, and Mike Purdy, all of whom sparked this year's reserve team to a fine record.

Hardballers field 10-5 record in '59

Continuing the winning tradition started in '58 the 1959 baseball team posted a worthy 10-5 record. The pitching strength that made it possible for the Panthers to emerge victorious over all but one of the county teams they played was provided by fireballer Jim South, who later signed a major league contract. Arch rival Southport, the only team to stop the Panther winning streak, sneaked out a one-run victory.

Student population figures continued the upward climb, necessitating an increase in the faculty also; 1550 pupils in the three upper grade levels, and 86 teachers, filled the school to capacity.

Faculty unified in educational objectives

A frequent comment made by visitors to schools in Washington Township Metropolitan District is that faculty members of the various schools, together with the administration, form a solid phalanx of persons dedicated to their appointed task of providing excellent educational opportunities for young people in the community.

This unity of purpose, recognized by every teacher in the system, spurs each to greater effort than might be shown if the administration were less conscious of its role in a world undergoing a giant upheaval in living conditions, politics, international relationships, and scientific and cultural discovery.

The educational process starts with the central administrative unit where teacher applications are carefully screened, parents harmoniously dealt with, and all the vast details of a complicated school system handled with efficiency and dispatch. It continues with the work of guidance people who assist by testing, interviewing, and counseling pupils to select areas in which they can best take advantage of their opportunities, and is completed in the classroom.

Dr. Schwilck greets Mr. and Mrs. Stokesberry who came to his home to join Mr. and Mrs. Coffin at a faculty "dessert."

Miss Geraldine Bagby, assistant principal, (left) on her way to a meeting after school, finds that an administrative job requires long hours. (right) Ronnie DeWitt, his mother Jane, and his brother Danny drove over to school to pick up assistant principal Gerald DeWitt at the end of a busy day that was filled with a variety of duties and responsibilities.

Administration and Counselors join in planning

Mrs. Elizabeth Jones, secretary to Everett Light, explains reports to Bernard McKenzie, and Robert Moore, assistant superintendents, Everett Light, superintendent, and Paul Griesel, business director.

At North Central this year, with the preliminary stages of planning and organizing completed, faculty members settled comfortably into their assorted niches and set out to prove that teaching high school pupils is a career in every sense of the word.

Monthly meetings became forums for the exchange of ideas. These were supplemented by after-school informal gatherings to hear talks by well-known educators, or by faculty members with interesting experiences to relate. The latter often illustrated their presentation with slides or movies. Occasionally the busy teachers, accompanied by members of their families, gathered for an evening of fun. During the first semester, Dr. Schwilck held a series of "desserts" on Sunday evenings in his home, to become better acquainted with the men and women with whom he was to work.

Constantly seeking new methods and improvements, faculty members visited other schools, held departmental meetings, invited university consultants to visit and talk with them, and attended professional meetings.

Vacation plans concern travel and schooling

Although all of them hold degrees, 78% of which are Masters and three with Doctorates, 75% of the teachers enrolled in advanced study, workshops, or summer schools during the current year. An impressive number made arrangements for study and travel in the summer of 1960.

Schools attended last year included Ball State, Indiana University, University of Wisconsin, Colgate, Middlebury College, University of Michigan, University of Colorado, and the University of Denver. Grants from the Foreign Language Institute, Science Foundation, and Newspaper Fund, Inc., among others, were used for tuition.

Most of the faculty travel extensively during vacations. Countries visited include Canada, Mexico, Hawaii, Europe, Japan, and South America. Mrs. Kraft and Miss Kleifgen, served as European exchange teachers. Mrs. Stokesberry lived in Vienna, Austria for seven months. Many of the men saw foreign service in the armed forces. Mrs. Kivett, who attended school in Switzerland as a child, is taking her daughter for a similar experience in Europe this summer.

Miss Mullen has applied for a Fullbright exchange teaching position in Belgium next summer. Mr. Martin and Mr. Brown hope to conduct a group of North Centralites to Europe. Mr. Vance, who spent Christmas vacation in Mexico and spring vacation in Guatemala, is headed for France.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS—(standing) James Keyt, Phillip Mann, and James Hunter. (seated) Robert Slater, and Mrs. Pauline Brothers.

The need for a change of pace from the demanding routine of school life is met by a variety of "extra-curricular" interests. Mr. DeWitt conducts a summer camp for young people. Mr. Bradley raises and trains Great Danes. Mr. Brinkerhoff enjoys his spare time playing in a family combo.

Other faculty hobbies include such diversified interests as photography, both stills and movies; orchid culture; silk screen printing on textiles; refinishing furniture; gardening; sewing; cooking; woodworking; electronics; bird feeding and watching; writing; reading, square dancing; drawing floor plans; and work in connection with theatricals.

Extra-Curricular Interests Include

MATHEMATICS DEPARTMENT—First Row: Mrs. Betty Culp, Mrs. Edith Wisner, Cecil Tharp, Mrs. Mary Spoon. Second Row: Gordon Gish, George Sharp, and James Davidson.

SCIENCE DEPARTMENT—First Row: Keith Mohr, Walter Viellieu, wrestling coach; and Burton Brinkerhoff. Second Row: Richard Moore, Earl Lindberg, Robert Watson, and William Phares.

Some of the women regard homemaking as their other career. "My hobby is spending as much time at our Brown County cabin as possible—cutting two acres of grass, looking for wild flowers, working at whatever there is so long as it is Brown County!" Dr. Eagle enthuses.

Sports in which both men and women participate actively are swimming, fishing, hunting, tennis, horseback, golf, camping, bowling, water and snow skiing, dancing, and chess. Mr. Mann is the undisputed table tennis champion of both the faculty and pupils. Most of the teachers are ardent sports fans, also, following the progress of both North Central and their college alma mater's teams.

Hobby collection proves fascinating to many. A woman member of the faculty gathers statistics on automobile races using them for the fun of comparison. Rocks and minerals, antiques, miniature shoes, pitchers, stamps, and records are collected. Civil War research and pistol markmanship are of interest to the military men of the faculty, General DeBard and Lieutenant Wilhelm.

BUSINESS ED—First Row: Mrs. Kathleen Keilman, (also Yearbook and News Bureau) Mrs. Edith Reese, Miss Ellen Warner. Second Row: Frank Rhea (also Visual Ed Department) William Cruzan, and Mrs. Carol Green.

Faculty statistics show that 65% are men as compared with 35% women. Sixty-three persons are married and twenty-three are single. One hundred and ten children play in North Central faculty homes.

To maintain a complicated school like North Central means a background battery of efficient people are needed. Eight secretaries work steadily, five days a week, ten months of the year. Installation of an IBM system, directed by Dr. Rose of the faculty, keeps one person busy with report cards and the compilation of a wide variety of statistical information.

Thirteen custodians and matrons are on hand daily to keep the building shining for the many visitors who constantly pass through its halls. Many of the maintenance men double as bus drivers, transporting pupils from their suburban homes.

Faculty and student body agree that North Central has perhaps one of the best school cafeterias to be found anywhere furnishing excellent food in a variety of choices. Mrs. Shields, the manager, provides seasonal directions to add a charming touch to the serving counters.

Twenty-five people work with the manager. These include one assistant, two meat cooks, one vegetable and one pastry cook, one pot and pan washer; three men and four girls who do miscellaneous work, and eight line girls who serve. Beside the regular counter, a snack bar provides quick lunches.

Home ec teachers Mrs. Margaret Stout and Miss Carolyn Kleifgan admire a display of European Christmas ornaments brought back by Miss Kleifgan who returned this fall from a year spent as an exchange teacher in London.

Highlights of Junior year, Spectacular and Prom

Diane Tramontini and Nancy Campbell, juniors, had the important job of student assistants to Mr. Martin and Mrs. Dunlap, who were the co-ordinators of the Junior Spectacular.

Far from taking a back seat to the Senior Class, the Juniors held their own by engaging in activities beneficial to their class and their school. The accomplishments of the Council, the officers, and other juniors contributed to making their second year at North Central memorable, giving promise of a successful senior year as graduates of 1961.

The first project of the Junior Council was to choose class rings. This involved a great deal of discussion, selection, and ordering. Next on the agenda was the most important project undertaken by the class—the Junior Spectacular. Committees were organized and student and faculty co-ordinators were chosen to insure the efficiency of the production. The concluding activity was the Prom, called "Deep Sea Dream". Vic Knight provided the music for this special affair which climaxed a full and wonderful year.

Officers were Dick Best, president; Jim Gilson, vice-president; Carolyn Riddell, secretary; and Bruce Peters, treasurer. Miss Wahneta Mullen and Richard Meek were sponsors of the Junior Class of 1961.

Sophomores follow class traditions

The intense rivalry between Eastwood and Westlane Junior Highs was forgotten when their freshmen enrolled at North Central as sophomores. United, the group worked together harmoniously on various projects. Individually it produced potential school leaders who became well-known early in the year.

As a money-raising project, the Sophomore Class sponsored a mixer after a December basketball game. Also, that month, an ambitious undertaking was successfully completed when a huge Christmas tree was purchased and decorated for the Student Center. Ornaments of all kinds, including the traditional "stockings" were made by imaginative class members. In February, the class celebrated with a "Holiday of Hearts" dance at which Don Foley's band played.

As a service project, the sophomore council assisted in the Student Council election of a president and vice-president for '60-'61.

Officers included: Denny Walters, chairman; Marilyn Boone, secretary; and Fred Matekunas, treasurer.

William Bugher sponsored the group.

Sometimes we wondered why we'd been so ambitious in planning the 1960 Northerner but when the book came out, we knew. We were proud and amazed! Proud that we had survived the grueling ordeal of infinite detail, planning, alternate hope and despair, and long months of hard work, and amazed over what we had learned about the publishing business.

Like all families we fussed at one another, "kidded" each other, and had our moments of wishing we would never see the yearbook again. But we emerged a unified group with a "heart tie" of having shared a project and brought it to a successful completion.

Stan Hoagland, Hank Wolfa, Mrs. Keilman, and Jim Burns.
